Workers, Managers, and Technological Change Daniel B. Cornfield, 2013-11-11 Workers Managers and Technological Change Emerging Patterns of Labor Relations contributes significantly to an important subject Technological change is one of the most powerful forces transforming the American industrial relations In fact the synergistic relationships between technology and indus system trial relations are so complex that they are not well or completely understood We know that the impact of technology while not independent of social forces already has been profound it has transformed occupations creating new skills and destroying others altered the power relationships between workers and managers and changed the way workers learn and work Tech nology also has made it possible to decentralize some economic activities out of large metropolitan areas and into small towns rural areas and other coun tries Most important information technology makes it possible for interna tional corporations to operate on a global basis Indeed some international corporations especially those based in the United States are losing their national identities detaching the welfare of corporations from that of particu lar workers and communities Internationalization facilitated by information technology has trans formed industrial relations systems A major objective of the traditional American industrial relations system was to take labor out of competition

labour relations laws by examining provincial laws which cover the overwhelming majority of Canadian workers and federal laws in Canada and federal and state laws in the United States in 2008 4 The study evaluates the extent to which labour relations laws achieve balance and flexibility in the labour market Jurisdictional differences Prior to the examination of labour relations laws in Canada and the United States it is important to recognize that there is a marked difference between the two countries in terms of the level of government responsible for the regulation of labour relations The National Labor Relations Board decides whether the purchaser is a successor employer by taking into account a number of factors including the number of employees taken over by the purchasing employer the similarity in operations and product of the two employers the manner in which the purchaser integrates the purchased operations into its other operations and the character of the bargaining relationship Whether the purchaser is a successor employer is dependent on several factors including the number of employees taken over by the purchasing employer the similarity in operations and product of the two employers the manner in which the purchaser integrates the purchased operations into its other operations and the character of the bargaining relationship and agreement between the union and the purchaser The ability to disrupt the operations of third parties means that the union and workers have the ability to affect not only the employer covered by the collective agreement but also any other company doing business with the primary firm and pressure from these third parties may force the employer to settle a strike instead of addressing the reasons for the strike The Changing Faces of Employment Relations David

Explaining Technical Change in a Small Country Synnöve Vuori,Pentti Vuorinen,2013-11-21

Technical change is produced by the interaction of a large number of technical economic social and institutional factors One of the starting points is the concept of national innovation systems The aim of this book is to take Finland as an example illustrating the challenges faced by small countries The characteristics and performance of the Finnish national innovation system of the last couple of decades are analyzed The Finnish experience is put in a broader context by comparing it with a few other countries The development paths possible in the near future are assessed According to the results many problems remain despite favourable developments in several technology indicators The rigidities of the social institutions created during the 1970s and 1980s seem to have become obstacles for economic and technological development There are fairly large differences between the countries studied and even between the culturally and historically close Nordic countries However Finland and Sweden seem to share the same kind of encompassing collective risk sharing systems which may have detrimental effects on for instance incentives related to innovativeness Increasing globalisation requires further development of the national system of innovation Technology policy must be seen as one part of more encompassing social and economic policies and the role of factors such as well functioning institutions appropriate education and sound incentive systems is highly important The papers of this book are written by experts of various research disciplines They reflect the respective views on the issue how technical change in Finland can be explained It is also discussed how Finland fares in comparison to Denmark Sweden Japan and the United States

The Employment Consequences of Technological Change Derek L. Bosworth,1983-06-18

Labor Relations in a Globalizing World Harry C. Katz,Thomas A. Kochan,Alexander J. S. Colvin,2015-06-04 Compelled by the extent to which globalization has changed the nature of labor relations Harry C Katz Thomas A Kochan and Alexander J S Colvin give us the first textbook to focus on the workplace outcomes of the production of goods and services in emerging countries In Labor Relations in a Globalizing World they draw lessons from the United States and other advanced industrial countries to provide a menu of options for management labor and government leaders in emerging countries They include discussions based in countries such as China Brazil India and South Africa which given the advanced levels of economic development they have already achieved are often described as transitional because the labor relations practices and procedures used in those countries are still in a state of flux Katz Kochan and Colvin analyze how labor relations functions in emerging countries in a manner that is useful to practitioners policymakers and academics They take account of the fact that labor relations are much more politicized in emerging countries than in advanced industrialized countries They also address the traditional role played by state dominated unions in emerging countries and the recent increased importance of independent unions that have emerged as alternatives These independent unions tend to promote firm or workplace level collective bargaining in contrast to the more traditional top down systems Katz Kochan and Colvin explain how multinational corporations nongovernmental organizations and other groups that act across national borders increasingly influence work and employment outcomes
