Common to all these approaches is their top down deductive procedure which does not connect very well to the real world of e government projects In contrast in this volume which is based on empirical research the authors introduce a bottom up inductive approach to deal with the challenges of interoperability related governance Based on so called good practice cases of interoperability in e government they derive concepts and classifications that help to uncover and assess similarities and differences between the cases As a result they present an empirically based conceptual framework that details the options for IT governance of interoperability in government In addition their findings also make it possible to critically assess and improve other existing frameworks With this work which combines different thematic foci as well as a European and a US background the authors situate empirical results in the broader context of theoretical and political reflection Thus they provide insights into strategic choices for CIOs in e government at a national or regional level experiences and lessons learned for managers and developers in e government projects and a huge set of empirical data for administrative and political scientists

Global Control Peter McMahon, 2002 Information systems and control technologies are key to globalization and while generally facilitating the overall trend to spatial reorganization they also effect change through the pervasive influence of internal systems logic Thus the author argues the dominant institutions of states firms and markets transform global development and are themselves transformed by key information technologies More specifically the book identifies the key phases of modern globalization and analyses the crucial role played by different information technologies at each point in time

Responsible Technology Stephen V. Monsma, Calvin Center for Christian Scholarship, 1986 This is a print on demand book and is therefore non returnable This book provides a multi disciplinary Christian analysis of the forces shaping the operation of modern technology and offers an alternative framework of biblically rooted normative principles It argues that technology is a value laden activity and presents principles for basing it on God s will
