Television An International History:

Television Anthony Smith, 1995 Television long regarded as mere entertainment is now being seriously considered for its significance in all our lives This is the first illustrated international history of our most influential cultural phenomenon Written by a distinguished team of experts it traces the evolution of television from the earliest times to the present assessing its impact in Europe America Japan Australia Africa and the Third World Extensively illustrated and accessibly written Television R. W. Burns, 1998 This book presents a balanced thorough history of television to 1940 considering the factors technical financial and social which influenced and led to the establishment of many of the world's high definition TV broadcasting services This is a major book in the study of history of science technology and media European Television Discourse in Transition Helen Kelly-Holmes, 1999 As we enter the age of digital television with its potential offering of five hundred channels this volume addresses the implications of the rapidly changing television environment for societies for groups for identities for communication for our sense of time space place for education for language for genres for our whole way of life

Modernization, Nation-Building, and Television History Stewart Anderson, Melissa Chakars, 2014-11-20 This innovative collection investigates the ways in which television programs around the world have highlighted modernization and encouraged nation building It is an attempt to catalogue and better understand the contours of this phenomenon which took place as television developed and expanded in different parts of the world between the 1950s and the 1990s From popular science and adult education shows to news magazines and television plays few themes so thoroughly penetrated the small screen for so many years as modernization with television producers and state authorities using television programs to bolster modernization efforts Contributors analyze the hallmarks of these media efforts nation building consumerism and consumer culture the education and integration of citizens and the glorification of the nation's technological achievements

The Birth of British Television Mark Aldridge, 2017-09-16 When the BBC launched the world's first regular high definition television service on 2 November 1936 it was the culmination of decades of technological innovations More than this however the service meant that the principle of television had finally found its place The Birth of British Television A History traces the early history and development of television from the experiments of amateurs to the institutionalised developments that led to the world's first regular high definition television service Author Mark Aldridge provides a clear in depth and accessible introduction for those either exploring the period for the first time or seeking new insights into the beginnings of the industry In tracing the origins and development of television Aldridge focuses on a number of important factors including the attitude of the press towards early television and examines the way that expectations of television changed over time prior to its official launch Utilising new research this illuminating study examines how the aims for a new television service developed and the extent to which content and technology were linked The Birth of British Television approaches this formative period from several perspectives from private individuals to the BBC and government while also examining the broader opinions at the time towards the new medium through press reports and feedback from the general public Also included is an assessment of early programming which helps to offer a new and profound evaluation of the development of early television Mark Aldridge is a Lecturer in Film and TV Studies at Southampton Solent University UK He specialises in British television and both film and television history His previous publications include T is for Television 2008 an analysis of the work of Russell T Davies co written with Andy Murray The Historian, Television and Television History Graham Roberts, Philip M. Taylor, Nicholas Pronay, 2001 The collected essays in this book arose out of the groundbreaking conference of the International Association of Media and History which brought together key academics and program makers from around the world involved in history and television including Nicholas Pronay Pierre Sorlin and Taylor Downing These essays offer a dialogue between academics and media practitioners that covers archival access analyses of how different TV systems have represented themselves case studies and the future of television Philip M Taylor is a professor of international communications and the director of the Institute of Communications at the University of Leeds Graham Roberts is a lecturer in communications arts at the University of Leeds

The History of Television, 1942 to 2000 Albert Abramson, 2007-09-29 Albert Abramson published with McFarland in 1987 a landmark volume titled The History of Television 1880 1941 massive research Library Journal voluminous documentation Choice many striking old photos The TV Collector At last he has produced the follow up volume the reader may be assured there is no other book in any language that is remotely comparable to it Together these two volumes provide the definitive technical history of the medium Upon the development in the mid 1940s of new cameras and picture tubes that made commercial television possible worldwide the medium rose rapidly to prominence Perhaps even more important was the invention of the video tape recorder in 1956 allowing editing re shooting and rebroadcasting This second volume 1942 to 2000 covers these significant developments and much more Chapters are devoted to television during World War II and the postwar era the development of color television Ampex Corporation s contributions television in Europe the change from helical to high band technology solid state cameras the television coverage of Apollo II the rise of electronic journalism television entering the studios the introduction of the camcorder the demise of RCA at the hands of GE the domination of Sony and Matsushita and the future of television in e cinema and the 1080 P24 format The book is heavily illustrated as is the first volume

A History of Early Television Stephen Herbert, 2004 In the 21st Century broadcast television is an established part of the lives of many millions of people all over the world bringing information and entertainment directly into our homes The pieces in this volume date from 1879 to 1934 and consist of a selection of books articles and news items relating to the first developmental period of television before it became the ubiquitous medium that we know today The selection is English language material only

Television before TV Anne-Katrin Weber, 2025-10-01 Television before TV rethinks the history of interwar television by exploring the medium's numerous demonstrations organized at national fairs and international exhibitions in the late 1920s and 1930s. Building upon extensive archival research in Britain, Germany, and the United States, Anne Katrin Weber analyses the sites where the new medium met its first audiences. She argues that public displays offered spaces where television's symbolic, cultural, political, and social definitions were negotiated and eventually stabilized. For the historian, the exhibitions therefore constitute crucial events to understand not only the medium's pre-war emergence but also its subsequent domestication in the post-war years. Designed as a transnational study, her book highlights the multiple circulations of artefacts and ideas across borders of democratic and totalitarian regimes alike. Richly illustrated with 100 photographs, Television before TV finally emphasizes that even without regular programmes, interwar television was widely seen. Transnational Television History Andreas Fickers, Catherine Johnson, 2013-09-13 Although television has developed into a major agent of the transnational and global flow of information and entertainment, television historiography and scholarship largely remains a national endeavour partly due to the fact that television has been understood as a tool for the creation of national identity. But the breaking of the quasi-monopoly of public service broadcasters all over Europe in the 1980s has changed the television landscape, and cross-border television channels with the help of satellite and the Internet have catapulted the relatively closed television nations into the universe of globalized media channels. At least this is the picture painted by the popular meta-narratives of European television history. Transnational Television History asks us to re-evaluate the function of television as a medium of nation building in its formative years and to reassess the historical narrative that insists that European television only became transnational with the emergence of more commercial services and new technologies from the 1980s. It also questions some common assumptions in television historiography by offering some alternative perspectives on the complex processes of transnational circulation of television technology, professionals, programmes, and aesthetics. This book was originally published as a special issue of Media History. The Columbia History of American Television Gary Edgerton, 2007-10-12 Television is a form of media without equal. It has revolutionized the way we learn about and communicate with the world and has reinvented the way we experience ourselves and others. More than just cheap entertainment, TV is an undeniable component of our culture and contains many clues to who we are, what we value, and where we might be headed in the future. Media historian Gary R. Edgerton follows the technological developments and increasing cultural relevance of TV from its prehistory before 1947 to the Network Era (1948-1975) and the Cable Era (1976-1994). He begins with the laying of the first telegraph line in 1844, which gave rise to the idea that images and sounds could be transmitted over long distances. He then considers the remodeling of television's look and purpose during World War II, the gender, racial, and ethnic components of its early broadcasts and audiences, its transformation of postwar America, and its function in the political life of the country. He talks of the birth of prime time and cable, the influence of innovators like Sylvester Pat Weaver, Roone Arledge, and Ted Turner, as well as television's entrance into the international market, describing the ascent of such programs as Dallas and The Cosby Show and the impact these exports have had on transmitting American culture abroad Edgerton concludes with a discerning look at our current Digital Era 1995 present and the new forms of instantaneous communication that continue to change America's social political and economic landscape Richly researched and engaging Edgerton's history tracks television's growth into a convergent technology a global industry a social catalyst a viable art form and a complex and dynamic reflection of the American mind and character It took only ten years for television to penetrate thirty five million households and by 1983 the average home kept their set on for more than seven hours a day The Columbia History of American Television illuminates our complex relationship with this singular medium and provides historical and critical knowledge for understanding TV as a technology an industry an art form and an institutional force

The Television History Book Michele Hilmes, Jason Jacobs, 2021-03-11 Traces the history of broadcasting and the influence developments in broadcasting have had over our social cultural and economic practices Examining the broadcasting traditions of the UK and USA The Television History Book make connections between events and tendencies that both unite and differentiate these national broadcasting traditions A History of Communications Marshall T. Poe, 2010-12-06 A History of Communications advances a theory of media that explains the origins and impact of different forms of communication speech writing print electronic devices and the Internet on human history in the long term New media are pulled into widespread use by broad historical trends and these media once in widespread use push social institutions and beliefs in predictable directions This view allows us to see for the first time what is truly new about the Internet what is not and where it is taking us Turning Points in Australian History Martin Crotty, David Andrew Roberts, 2009 This exciting and stimulating book looks back at turning points and crucial moments in Australian history Rather than arguing that there have been forks on a pre determined road the book challenges us to think about other paths or better paths that might have led to different outcomes International History of the Recording Industry Pekka Gronow, Ilpo Saunio, 1999-07-26 This book explores the fascinating world of the record business its technology the music and the musicians from Edison's phonograph to the compact disc The great artists Caruso Toscanini Louis Armstrong Elvis Presley and their successors all achieved fame through the medium of records and in turn have influenced the recording industry But just as important are the record producers those invisible figures who decide from behind the scenes how a record will sound The history of recording is also the history of record companies the book follows the vicissitudes of the multinational giants without neglecting the small pioneering labels which have brought valuable new talents to the fore

Remembering Television Kate Darian-Smith, Sue Turnbull, 2013-01-16 This path breaking book extends our knowledge of the social and cultural impacts of television asking new questions about the ways television's technologies and programming have been experienced understood and remembered Television has served as a companion to the historical events that have unfolded in our everyday lives both on and off the screen and its presence is intricately bound up in our memories of the past
