Marc Steinberg, Alexander Zahlten, 2017-03-09 Providing an overview of Japanese media theory from the 1910s to the present this volume introduces English language readers to Japan's rich body of theoretical and conceptual work on media for the first time. The essays address a wide range of topics including the work of foundational Japanese thinkers, Japanese theories of mediation and the philosophy of media, the connections between early Japanese television and consumer culture and architecture's intersection with communications theory. Tracing the theoretical frameworks and paradigms that stem from Japan's media ecology, the contributors decenter Eurocentric media theory and demonstrate the value of the Japanese context to reassessing the parameters and definition of media theory itself. Taken together, these interdisciplinary essays expand media theory to encompass philosophy, feminist critique, literary theory, marketing discourse, and art, providing a counterbalance to the persisting universalist impulse of media studies and emphasizing the need to consider media theory situationally. Why have both its programmes and its audiences been so widely denigrated? Taking inspiration from Richard Hoggart's classic study The Uses of Literacy, John Hartley's new book is a lucid defence of the place of television in our lives and of the usefulness of television studies. Hartley reconceptualizes television as a transmodern medium capable of reuniting government, education, and media and of creating a new kind of cultural teaching which facilitates communication across social and geographical boundaries. He provides a historical framework for the development of both television and television studies, his focus ranging from an analysis of the early documentary Housing Problems to the much overlooked cultural impact of the refrigerator. Relocating Television Jostein Gripsrud, 2012-07-26 For over half a century, television has been the most central medium in Western democracies, the political, social, and cultural centrepiece of the public sphere. Television has therefore rarely been studied in isolation from its socio-cultural and political context; there is always something important at stake when the forms and functions of television are on the agenda. The digitisation of television concerns the production, contents, distribution, and reception of the medium, but also its position in the overall, largely digitised media system and public sphere where the internet plays a decisive role. The articles in this comprehensive collection are written by some of the world's most prominent scholars in the field of media communication and cultural studies, including critical film and television studies. Relocating Television offers readers an insight into studying television alongside the internet, participatory media, and other technocultural phenomena such as DVDs, user-generated content, and everyday digital media production. It also focuses on more specific programmes and phenomena, including The Wire, MSN amateur footage in TV news, Bollywoodization of TV news, YouTube fan sites, tied to e.g. Grey's Anatomy and X Factor. Relocating Television will be highly beneficial to both students and academics across a wide range of undergraduate and postgraduate courses, including media communication and cultural studies and television and film studies      Television in Bangladesh Ratan Kumar Roy, 2020-12-28 This book examines the role of 24/7 television news channels in Bangladesh. By using a multi-sited ethnography of television news media, it showcases the socio-political undercurrents of media practices and the everydayness of TV news in Bangladesh. It discusses a wide gamut of issues such as news making, localised public sphere, audience reaction and viewing culture, impact of rumours and fake news, socio-political conditions, protest mobilization, newsroom politics and perspectives from the ground. An important intervention in the subject, this book will be useful to scholars and researchers of media studies, journalism and mass communication, anthropology, cultural studies, political sociology, political science, sociology, South Asian studies as well as television professionals, journalists, civil society activists and those interested in the study of Bangladesh.

Escaping the Global Village Niamh Hourigan, 2004-01-01 In the face of expanding global media, Europe's linguistic minorities have begun to resist the homogenizing forces of television. Escaping the Global Village documents and analyzes various campaigns by indigenous minority language advocates throughout Europe for alternative language television services.
