The Songs of Bilitis is a collection of erotic essentially lesbian poetry by Pierre Louÿs published in Paris in 1894. Since Louÿs claimed that he had translated the original poetry from Ancient Greek, this work is considered a pseudotranslation.

Excerpt from The Songs of Bilitis Translated From the Greek Put Into English From the French. Notwithstanding the weighty argument and the learned polemics of the distinguished professor in Göttingen who in 1896 took up arms in learned protest against this collection of pictures of ancient Greek life told in exquisitely beautiful modern French and who sought with it as a text to bring forward an unnecessary defence of the character of that wonderful priestess and inspiratrice Sappho, the translator has felt that such a protest and such a defence were unnecessary and has believed that the beauty of the pictures presented by many of the songs is sufficient excuse for their existence in spite of the marked aversion of sexualism that detracts from while it does not embellish the idea sought to be presented. The most enthusiastic defender of the ancients is bound to admit that the pure sexualism and the various forms of sexual degeneracy described in these poems do not furnish an overdrawn picture of the social conditions among the Greeks at the period described and while there is always a grave question for moralists and regulators of social ethics concerning the advisability of informing the public as to the facts in this respect, the translator believes that public education has so tempered the minds of the majority of the people of this country that a book of this character can safely be placed in their hands without harm to individuals and without producing any general perversion of public morals or of public conduct. Not illustrated. 1904 edition. Excerpt of its mother Tremble. Thrill. Sweet, one my kisses reach far and should satisfy thy love. Lightly will I touch thy breasts and arms with my tongue and lips and behind thine ears and upon thy neck I will leave the marks of my kisses and while I

kiss thee my hands shall stray in mad delight over the ivory nakedness of thy sensitive body trembling under the touch of my nails Listen Mnasidika Hear the murmuring of my love in thine ears like the wild humming of the sea Mnasidika thy look drives me mad I will close thy burning eyes with a kiss as if they were thy lips JEALOUS THOUGHTS HOU needst not dress thine hair for fear lest the hot iron scorch thy neck or burn thy black locks Thou shouldst let it hang upon thy shoulders and spread out over the length of thine arms Thou needst not dress thyself lest thy close girdle should redden the folds of the skin over thy hips Better shouldst thou rest naked like a little girl It is not even best that thou shouldst rise for fear that thy delicate feet should be bruised in walking Thou shouldst repose in thy bed oh victim of Eros and I will dress thy poor wound For I could not bear to see upon thy body other marks Mnasidika than the purple of a kiss too long prolonged the trace of a sharp nail or the reddening line of my passionate embrace THE DESPAIRING EMBRACE OVE me not with smiles or with flutes or with the plaited flowers but with thy heart and with thy tears even as I love thee with my sorrowing breast and my moans When thy breasts alternate with my breasts when I feel thy life touch my life when thy knees stand up behind me then my panting mouth knows not more how to join itself to thine Press me to thee as I press thee to me See the lamp has died
