

Eduqas Poetry Anthology: Sonnet 43

About

- Elizabeth Barrett Browning's sonnet sequence was written before she married Robert Browning to express her intense love for him
- Sonnet 43 is the most famous of the 44 sonnets.
- In it, Browning attempts to define her love. The opening of the poem suggests it arises from a question: 'How do I love thee? Let me count the ways!'

Key Quotations

- The opening line 'How do I love thee?' suggests an intimate conversation between lovers.
- 'Depth', 'breadth' and 'height' are weighty concepts which suggest her love is comprehensive and allows her to reach impossible extremes.
- Poem of comparisons – 'Most quiet need' and 'when strife for Right' are two very different ideas. One is simple and one is complex showing the intensity of her feelings.
- Replaced her faith in God with her love for her husband – 'best saints'.
- Final words – 'I love thee better after death' suggests even death will not part them. Their love is eternal.

Structure

- Made up of 14 lines and a regular four-beat iambic pentameter.
- The word 'love' is repeated for emphasis and love is compared to various 'best saints'.
- The way that the lines are broken up by punctuation at the end could represent breathlessness and passion.
- The poem is autobiographical and reflects the struggles that she went through to be with her true love, Robert Browning.

Context of poem

- Elizabeth Barrett Browning lived a fairly lonely existence until the age of thirty, when she met and fell in love with her husband, Robert (also a famous poet).
- She was extremely devoted to Robert, that father disapproved but still she managed to be with all her children, as from that point onwards, Robert was her world.
- Sonnet 43 was part of a collection of poems that initially, Barrett Browning was hesitant to publish. They were intensely personal, focusing on her love for her new husband, and were not intended to be made public.
- However, her husband insisted they were the best examples of English-language sonnets since Shakespeare's time and urged her to publish them.
- To offer the couple some privacy, she decided to publish them as if they were translations of foreign sonnets written by poets from other countries. By doing this, she could publish her intensely personal feelings without private scrutiny!
