By 1900, industrial hygiene had emerged as a new and important branch of occupational safety and health. Public health departments and labor unions began to employ industrial hygienists to investigate occupational diseases and environmental hazards. The American Society of Sanitary Engineers (ASSE) was founded in 1884, and the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers (ASHVE) was founded in 1886. These organizations played a key role in the development of industrial hygiene as a profession.
