Structural Adjustment, Agrarian Change, and Rural Ethnicity in Nigeria Samuel G. Egwu, 1998 1 SAP and the problematic of rural ethnicity Structural Adjustment and Women Informal Sector Traders in Harare, Zimbabwe Rodreck Mupedziswa, Perpetua Gumbo, 1998 Most attempts to study the informal sector have tended to emphasize uniformity of experiences Where an effort has been made to develop a more nuanced understanding the assumption has always been that people move from lower to higher level activities that coincide with increased opportunities for accumulation This report challenges both notions Drawing on the experiences of women informal sector traders in Harare Zimbabwe and using a longitudinal study approach the authors document differentiation within the sector amidst generalized decline in working and living conditions Far from being a site of accumulation the authors show that the informal sector during the era of adjustment is a site of bare survival in which people work ever longer hours for ever diminishing incomes on which many competing claims are made within and outside the household

Land Reform Under Structural Adjustment in Zimbabwe Sam Moyo, 2000 This study represents a first systematic effort to document Zimbabwe's new land uses during the years of economic crisis the role of the state in promoting them the differentiation associated with them not only between black and white farmers but also among them and the implications of all these for the political economy of the Zimbabwean land question The fact that some of the new land uses avoid redistribution of clearly under utilised large scale commercial farms suggests that the Zimbabwean land question will remain a live political issue for a long time

The Changing Forms of Identity Politics in Nigeria Under Economic Adjustment Cyril I. Obi, 2001 The Niger delta region of Nigeria which is at the heart of the country's oil industry has a long history of struggles for self determination dating back to the early years of the 20th century In the 1980s and

1990s these struggles unfolding as they did within the context of military authoritarianism and structural adjustment took the form of widespread agitation for greater control by local communities of the revenues accruing to the Nigerian state from exploration and extraction of oil This study attempts to capture the transformations in ethnic minority identity politics in the oil producing areas of the Niger delta In doing this attention is simultaneously drawn to the factors informing the shift from peaceful agitation to violent protest as well as the dynamic of decay and renewal in the various ethnic minority movements that are active in the delta It is suggested that part of the solution to the crisis in the delta will involve not only a thorough going restructuring of the Nigerian state but also the re orientation of the mode of operation of the giant oil multinationals in order to make them both more sensitive and accountable to the local communities
