

LITERATURE REVIEW STRUCTURE AND PROCESS

One possible structure for the literature review might be as follows

INTRODUCTION

How this literature review tie into your experience and research interests. What is the question that this literature review tries to answer? How did you decide which sources to include and which not? What type of sources were you looking for when searching the literature?

THE ISSUE, TOPIC OR THEME

Why is this significant and what are the challenges being addressed, as reported by the literature? (You may also wish to structure your literature review around sub-themes.)

GAPS IN THE LITERATURE

Open questions and where further work is needed. What aspects are not covered by the literature? Which perspectives should be (better) addressed by the literature?

CONCLUSION

Where this issue/topic is heading. The tasks ahead for people addressing this issue.

REFERENCES

List sources cited, including any media (APA Style).
