Crerar's Lieutenants Geoffrey Hayes, 2017-07-12 In 1943 General Harry Crerar penned a memorandum in which he noted that there was still much confusion as to what constitutes an Officer His words reflected the army's preoccupation with creating an ideal officer who would not only meet the immediate demands of war but also be able to conform to notions of social class and masculinity Drawing on a wide range of sources and exploring the issue of leadership through new lenses this book looks at how the army selected and trained its junior officers after 1939 to embody the new ideal It finds that these young men through the mentors they copied the correspondence they left even the songs they sang practised a temperate heroism that distinguished them from the idealized heroic visions of officership from the First World War Fascinating and highly original this book sheds new light on the challenges many junior officers faced during the Second World War not only on the battlefield but from Canadians often conflicted views about social class and gender Citizen Sailors Richard Howard Gimblett, Michael L. Hadley, 2010-11-16 This commemorative volume records a special kind of dual citizenship Canadians exercising the profession of the sea in their nation's service while also living out their civilian occupations in their home communities The perspectives of these citizen sailors provide an interesting valuable and timely alternative history of the Canadian Navy
