Structural Adjustment in Africa

■ Seamus Cleary

At least some structural adjustment programmes have had negative effects on the quality of life of African people. Many of the causes of Africa's deepening economic crisis stem from events outside its control. Nevertheless, adjustment to altered economic circumstances and market conditions is unavoidable. The scope for African governments to embark on adjustment programmes outside the orthodox framework is severely limited. But the appropriateness of this model in African conditions is questionable particularly in view of the human impact of the programmes. These include rising food prices, unemployment and deterioration in health and education services threatening the political stability of African countries. Adjustment programmes need to be fundamentally re-designed if they are to contribute to sustainable development in Africa.

Currently, some thirty Sub-Saharan African countries are implementing structural adjustment programmes. The essence of these programmes is the reduction/removal of direct state intervention in the productive and distributive sectors of the economy and the restriction of the State's role to the creation, mainly through the manipulation of fiscal and monetary instruments, of an institutional and policy framework conducive to the mobilisation of private enterprise and initiative.[1]

Structural Adjustment, Reconstruction and Development in Africa Kempe Ronald Hope,2019-06-04 First published in 1997 this volume is intended to make a contribution to both the literature and the contentious debate on the relationship between structural adjustment and reconstruction and development in Africa as seen from the multidisciplinary perspective of academics and practitioners working in Africa on African development problems and issues The implementation of structural adjustment in Africa has spawned a considerable and still on going debate with vociferous advocates on both sides of the issue particularly with respect to the efficacy of structural adjustment programmes SAPs as an antidote to Africa s development crisis This book contributes to that debate with a rich mixture of analytical views and ideas covering a wide range of countries and sectors on the role and impact of structural adjustment programmes on the process of reconstruction and development in Africa Stabilization and Structural Adjustment Finn Tarp,2002-09-11 This book reveals and examines the relevance of the macroeconomic theory and models behind recommendations for stabilization and structual adjustment Alternaive analytical approaches are discusses This is done on the basis of an up to date review of developments in sub saharan Africa during the 1980 s and within a common analytical framework Women Pay the Price Gloria T. Our Continent, Our Future P. Thandika Mkandawire,Charles Chukwuma Soludo,1998 Our Continent Our Future presents the emerging African perspective on this complex issue The authors use as background their own extensive experience and a collection of 30 individual studies 25 of which were from African economists to summarize this African perspective and articulate a path for the future They underscore the need to be sensitive to each country s unique history and current condition They argue for a broader policy agenda and for a much more active role for the state within what is largely a market economy Finally they stress that Africa must and can compete in an increasingly globalized world and perhaps most importantly that Africans must assume the leading role in defining the continent s development agenda Structural Adjustment and Beyond in Sub-Saharan Africa Rolph van der Hoeven,F.
