Forces, Loads, and Materials Notes

Forces in Structures

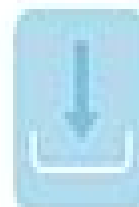

Forces acting on structures can be categorised as static or dynamic.

- Static forces are forces that do not change with time and do not cause motion. Examples include the weight of a building and the forces holding it in place.
- Dynamic forces change with time, such as wind gusts, earthquakes, or moving loads like vehicles.

Loads in Structures

Loads can be categorised as even or uneven.

- Even loads distribute weight or force uniformly over a structure, like the weight of a roof evenly distributed on its supports.
- Uneven loads concentrate weight or force at specific points, areas, or sections of a structure, such as the weight of a heavy appliance on a single support.
