

The background of the book cover is a photograph of a classroom. On the left, a large wooden column is visible. In the center, a chalkboard is filled with handwritten text in white chalk. The top of the board features the American flag. Below the flag, there are several lines of arithmetic problems: $4+4=$, $3+3=$, $2+1=$, and $1+6=$. To the right of these problems, the words "nest" and "this is a nest" are written, followed by "this is a nest" again. The bottom of the chalkboard is mostly blank. In the foreground, the top of a wooden desk is visible on the right side.

American Catholic Schools in the Twentieth Century Ann Marie Ryan, 2022-02-21 This book examines how Catholic educators grappled with public educational policies and reforms like standardization and accreditation educational measurement and testing and federal funding for schools during the early to mid twentieth century These issues elicited an array of reactions including resistance cooperation and co-optation American Catholics had established one of the largest private educational organizations in the United States by the twentieth century It rivaled only that of the public school system At mid century Catholic schools enrolled some 12 percent of the American school age population and their enrollments grew in number through the 1960s The Catholic Church's lobbying arm the National Catholic Welfare Conference NCWC used its well earned stature to push for federal funds for students attending their schools The NCWC succeeded in securing funds with the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 for students needing special education services and students living in poverty attending Catholic schools This signified a major shift in American education policy Despite this radical change Catholic schools lost significant enrollment over the next several decades to public private and newly minted public charter schools Catholic schools faced an increasingly competitive landscape in an ever expanding school choice environment that they helped create
