Monterey Bay Study Robert M. Bizzell, Lewis C. Wade, 1975 The multispectral scanner capabilities of LANDSAT 1 were tested over California's Monterey Bay area and portions of the San Joaquin Valley Using both computer aided and image interpretive processing techniques the LANDSAT 1 data were analyzed to determine their potential application in terms of land use and agriculture Utilizing LANDSAT 1 data analysts were able to provide the identifications and areal extent of the individual land use categories ranging from very general to highly specific levels e g from agricultural lands to specific field crop types and even the different stages of growth It is shown that the LANDSAT system is useful in the identification of major crop species and the delineation of numerous land use categories on a global basis and that repeated surveillance would permit the monitoring of changes in seasonal growth characteristics of crops as well as the assessment of various cultivation practices with a minimum of onsite observation The LANDSAT system is demonstrated to be useful in the planning and development of resource programs on earth
