Loreen beautifully and eloquently depicts life becoming a missionary and being a missionary utterly sold out to Jesus Christ. This book landed in my lap at a crucial time. My family is facing insurmountable odds with multiple illnesses and trials. As a person walking by faith, this book only enhanced my confidence. The Making of a Missionary is a must read for anyone seeking faith in God or desiring to grow in their already established faith in our Lord and Savior. In the USA, most Christians have weak faith because Christianity is so common. However, in third world countries, especially Russia and the surrounding countries, atheism, agnosticism, Russian Orthodoxy, and more are all too standard. People experience radical transformations often because they have experienced more suffering than we can imagine in North America. We can all use a good dose of faith-filled stories of God's loving kindness upon mankind. We all go through trials, saved or unsaved, but going through them in Christ, watching and waiting in unwavering faith that God will fulfill His promise to us, makes all the difference. Author and Missionary Ittermann has brilliantly accomplished logging stories of God's amazing love, grace, mercy, patience, and miracles. Do not hesitate to obtain your copy of The Making of a Missionary today. Author, Publisher, and Minister Alexys V Wolf of The Fiery Sword Global Ministries.

Congregational Missions and the Making of an Imperial Culture in Nineteenth-Century England Susan Thorne, 1999. This book explores the missionary movement's influence on popular perceptions of empire and race in nineteenth-century England. The foreign missionary endeavor was one of the most influential of the channels through which nineteenth-century Britons encountered the colonies, and because of their ties to organized religion, foreign missionary societies enjoyed more regular access to a popular audience than any other colonial lobby. Focusing on the influential denominational case of English Congregationalism, this study shows how the missionary movement's audience in Britain was inundated with propaganda designed to mobilize financial and political support for missionary operations abroad. Propaganda in which the imperial context and colonized targets of missionary operations figured prominently. In her attention to the local social contexts in which missionary propaganda was disseminated, the author departs from the predominantly cultural thrust of recent studies of imperialism's popularization. She shows how Congregationalists made use of the language and institutional space provided by missions in their struggles to negotiate local relations of power. In the process, the missionary project was implicated in some of the most important developments in the social history of nineteenth-century Britain: the popularization of organized religion and its subsequent decline, the emergence and evolution of a language of class, the gendered making of a middle class, and the strange death of British liberalism.
