Soft-Hackled Flatwing

Need a searching pattern for stripers? Who doesn't? I have one for strippers, but not for stripers. There was this one time in Australia ... never mind.

Steve Culon is a Connecticut fly guide, outdoor writer, speaker, and fly-tyer. But we won't hold that against him. He likes this pattern for moving water in places like the lower Housatonic River, sections of Pleasant Bay on Cape Cod, or Rhode Island's South County beaches and backwaters. Check out his webpage, currentseams.com.

Steve wanted a fly that incorporated the best elements of soft hackles and flatwings: one that was suggestive and impressionistic rather than a carbon copy of a baitfish; one he could fish on the strip, dead-drift, swing, or dangle; one that breathed and pulsed even when at rest; and one that allowed him to use any color combination he desired.

Steve said that because it is an impressionistic fly, you can tie it as long or as short as you like. His default is 3.5 inches, though a mallet could be 6 to 7 inches, and a peanut bunker could be 2 inches. The same goes for color — match it to the conditions or bait. He said, "There are a lot of influences here. I've always liked sparse bucktails like Ray Bondow's classic Ray's Fly. And, I'm a huge fan of Ken Abeames' flatwings. Finally, add in a little soft hackle influence from Jack Gartside."

Steve explained this pattern has multiple bite triggers. Because it's a flatwing, it will swim with a realistic motion, and you don't have to strip it for it to look alive. Flash is used in small amounts that enhance rather than overwhelm the creation. Finally, it is sparse rather than opaque. What you leave out of a fly is as important as what you put into it.

This is a great searching pattern. Steve usually starts with a greased-line swing. At drift's end, he lets it hang in the current, resulting in an explosive hit, though the fish sometimes want the fly moving quickly with long strips and pauses.

He uses a floating line 90 percent of the time, but occasionally he uses sections of T-11 or a full-sink integrated line. He hardly ever adds weight to this pattern.

Steve said, "Several years ago, in early May, I fished the mouth of Connecticut's Housatonic River. The conditions were terrible: easterly blow with gusts up to 30 knots, random rain squalls, plus chop and waves that you usually don't see in an estuary. The kite-surfers were out in force and so were the stripers. In the gray/green maelstrom that was the river mouth, I took bass after bass on a gray/fluorescent-yellow Soft-Hackled Flatwing. Striper thumb hurts so good."

Autographed copies of Lolli's new book, www.currentseams.com, Art of the Fishing Fly, with an introduction by former President Jimmy Carter, are available from Tony Lolli, 1589 Leggett Rd., Grantsville, MD, 21736, for $30 with free shipping.
