Proceedings RMRS. ,2000 Wilderness Science in a Time of Change Conference ,2000 Wilderness Science in a Time of Change Conference: Wilderness ecosystems, threats, and management ,2000 The Importance of Species Peter Kareiva, Simon A. Levin, 2015-01-22 A great many species are threatened by the expanding human population. Though the public generally favors environmental protection, conservation does not come without sacrifice and cost. Many decision makers wonder if every species is worth the trouble. Of what consequence would the extinction of say spotted owls or snail darters be? Are some species expendable? Given the reality of limited money for conservation efforts, there is a compelling need for scientists to help conservation practitioners set priorities and identify species most in need of urgent attention. Ecology should be capable of providing guidance that goes beyond the obvious impulse to protect economically valuable species, salmon or aesthetically appealing ones, snow leopards. Although some recent books have considered the ecosystem services provided by biodiversity as an aggregate property, this is the first to focus on the value of particular species. It provides the scientific approaches and analyses available for asking what we can expect from losing or gaining species. The contributors are outstanding ecologists, theoreticians, and evolutionary biologists who gathered for a symposium honoring Robert T. Paine, the community ecologist who experimentally demonstrated that a single predator species can act as a keystone species whose removal dramatically alters entire ecosystem communities. They build on Paine's work here by exploring whether we can identify species that play key roles in ecosystems before they are lost forever. These are some of our finest ecologists asking some of our hardest questions. They are in addition to the editors: S. E. B. Abella, G. C. Chang, D. Doak, A. L. Downing, W. T. Edmondson, A. S. Barrett, Maria Teresa Ferreira, Ilidio S. Moreira, Kevin J. Murphy, Philip Max Wade, 2013-04-17 There is a growing need for appropriate management of aquatic plants in rivers and canals, lakes and reservoirs, and drainage channels and urban waterways. This management must be based on a sound knowledge of the ecology of freshwater plants, their distribution, and the different forms of control available, including chemical and physical and biological and biomanipulation. This series of papers from over 20 different countries was generated from the tenth in the highly successful series of European Weed Research Society symposia on aquatic plant management this being the tenth It provides a valuable insight into the complexities involved in managing aquatic systems discusses state of the art control techniques and deals with patterns of regrowth and recovery post management Careful consideration is given to the use of chemicals a practice which has come under scrutiny in recent years Underpinning the development of such control techniques is a growing body of knowledge relating to the biology and ecology of water plants The authorship of the papers represents the collective wisdom of leading scientists and experts from fisheries agencies river authorities nature conservation agencies the agrochemical industry and both governmental and non governmental organisations
