Learning and Governance in the EU Policy Making Process Anthony R. Zito, 2013-10-18 This book takes stock of learning theories in the European Union EU integration literature and assesses what insights the concept of learning has added to our understanding of the European integration processes Given the European integration dynamics since 2000 including enlargement and new governance approaches and instruments learning and learning related theories have gained major EU significance The book addresses the less noticed micro level patterns of behavioural change that deserve more visibility in the EU s theoretical toolbox It focuses on the conditions under which EU actors in various decision making processes learn or do not learn In asking this question it raises issues about the EU s nature Do the EU conditions that favour learning outweigh the EU conditions that inhibit learning Is the EU system too complex for learning processes to have a discernible concrete impact To assess the degree that the EU system and its member states learn the authors selected for this volume are all explicitly comparative in their approach and have been encouraged to look at differences across political systems In doing so the authors study how EU member states EU institutions and other groups and organisations pursue learning across the multi level EU policy process This book was previously published as a special issue of Journal of European Public Policy Network Policy Making within the Turkish Health Sector Julinda Hoxha, 2020-03-13 This book presents findings produced by micro and meso level analysis of policy networks using the Turkish context as a new case study and demonstrates that networks have become an integral part of the practice of policy making within the Turkish health sector

Belief and Religion in Barbarian Europe c. 350-700 Marilyn Dunn, 2013-11-28 This ground breaking study offers a new paradigm for understanding the beliefs and religions of the Goths Burgundians Sueves Franks and Lombards as they converted from paganism to Christianity between c 350 and c 700 CE Combining history and theology with approaches drawn from the cognitive science of religion Belief and Religion in Barbarian Europe uses both written and archaeological evidence to challenge many older ideas Beginning with a re examination of our knowledge about the deities and rituals of their original religions it goes on to question the assumption that the Germanic peoples were merely passive recipients of Christian doctrine arguing that so called Arianism was first developed as an entry level Christianity for the Goths Focusing on individual ethnic groupings in turn it presents a fresh view of the relationship between religion and politics as their rulers attempted to opt for Catholicism In place of familiar debates about post conversion pagan survivals contemporary texts and legislation are analysed to create an innovative cognitive perspective on the ways in which the Church endeavoured to bring the Christian God into people s thoughts and actions The work also includes a survey of a wide range of written and archaeological evidence contrasting traditional conceptions of death afterlife and funerary ritual with Christian doctrine and practice in these areas and exploring some of the techniques developed by the Church for assuaging popular anxieties about Christian burial and the Christian afterlife
