The Comprehensive Public High School G. Angus, Jeffrey Mirel, 1999 This provocative new study of the American high school examines the historical debates about curriculum policy and also traces changes in the institution itself as evidenced by what students actually studied Contrary to conventional accounts the authors argue that beginning in the 1930s American high schools shifted from institutions primarily concerned with academic and vocational education to institutions mainly focused on custodial care of adolescents Claiming that these changes reflected educators racial class and gender biases the authors offer original suggestions for policy adjustments that may lead to greater educational equality for our ever growing and ever more diverse population of students The Comprehensive High School, 1960 The Productive High School Joseph Murphy, 2001-02-20 Murphy and his colleagues discuss how reform based on empirical evidence and a robust set of theories can create productive high schools for all students Focus is on core technologies of learning and teaching organizational systems and institutional linkages between schools and their environments Using current research and case studies from successful schools they show how to construct models of learning driven school communities that encourage excellence Key concepts cover defining the learning imperative developing humanized and intellectual relationships for learning laying the groundwork for dynamic adaptive change and building linkages with home and family Vocational and Occupational Education United States.
