The Army of the Future Charles de Gaulle,1977-03-02 The Army of the Future, at Once Military and Industrial Rev. George d'Oyly SNOW,1855 The Army's Future Combat Systems Program and Alternatives ,2006 In today s environment of rapidly evolving conflicts the Army s goal is to have units that have the combat power of heavy units but that can be transported anywhere in the world in a matter of days To address concerns about the armored vehicle fleet s aging and the difficulties involved in transporting it as well as to equip the Army more suitably to conduct operations overseas on short notice using forces based in the United States the service created the Future Combat Systems FCS program in 2000 A major modernization effort the program is designed in part to develop and purchase vehicles to replace those now in the heavy forces the new vehicles would be much lighter thereby easing the deployment of units equipped with them In the analysis presented in this report the Congressional Budget Office CBO examined the current status of the Army s fleet of armored vehicles and assessed the speed of deployment of the service s heavy forces It also evaluated the FCS program considering the program s costs as well as its advantages and disadvantages and comparing it with several alternative plans for modernizing the Army s heavy forces Current and Future Readiness of the Army and Marine Corps United States. Francis,2009-09 The Future Combat System FCS program which comprises 14 integrated weapon systems and an advanced information network is the centerpiece of the Army's effort to transition to a lighter more agile and more capable combat force. The substantial technical challenges, the cost of the program and the Army's acquisition strategy are among the reasons why the program is recognized as needing special oversight and review. This testimony is based on a March 12, 2009 report and addresses knowledge gaps that will persist in the FCS program as Congress is asked to make significant funding commitments for development and production over the next several years.

Following the 2010 strategic defence and security review Cm 7948 ISBN 9780101794824 the MoD is redesigning the Armed Forces to meet new security challenges at home and abroad. The report in July 2011 by the Independent Commission to Review the United Kingdom's Reserve Forces ISBN 9780108510892 found that the Reserve Forces were in decline, not being used cost effectively with capabilities not being fully exploited. The Ministry of Defence says it will spend 1.8 billion over the next decade to improve their strength and effectiveness. This aims to support an increase in the reserve forces to a trained strength in the Army Reserve of 30,000, the Maritime Reserve of 3,100 and the Royal Auxiliary Air Force of 1,800 all by 2018. Proposed changes mean that the routine delivery of the nation's security will broaden from being solely the responsibility of standing regular forces. The government says it will work with employers and give them more notice before staff are deployed. Reservists' training would increase with the promise that if they met their commitments they would be better equipped and funded. This Green paper starts a process of consultation to determine the nature of new relationship with society needed to sustain the Reserve Forces in the future. It explains the broad responsibilities of the future

Reserve Forces and then lays out the expected implications for civilian employers reservists and reservists families Army of None: Autonomous Weapons and the Future of War Paul Scharre, 2018-04-24 Winner of the 2019 William E Colby Award The book I had been waiting for I can't recommend it highly enough Bill Gates The era of autonomous weapons has arrived Today around the globe at least thirty nations have weapons that can search for and destroy enemy targets all on their own Paul Scharre a leading expert in next generation warfare describes these and other high tech weapons systems from Israel's Harpy drone to the American submarine hunting robot ship Sea Hunter and examines the legal and ethical issues surrounding their use A smart primer to what's to come in warfare Bruce Schneier Army of None engages military history global policy and cutting edge science to explore the implications of giving weapons the freedom to make life and death decisions A former soldier himself Scharre argues that we must embrace technology where it can make war more precise and humane but when the choice is life or death there is no replacement for the human heart The Future of Military Engines Andrew P. Hunter, Gabriel Coll, Asya Akca, Schuyler Moore, 2021-10-08 CSIS's The Future of Military Engines looks at the state of the U.S. military engine industrial base and the choices confronting policymakers at the Department of Defense DoD The military engine industrial base is closely tied to the industrial base for commercial engines U.S. engine providers use many of the same facilities and largely the same supply chain for military and commercial engines The ability to leverage commercial supply chains is critical because supply chain quality underlies the performance advantage of U.S. military engines both for individual aircraft and military aircraft fleets International competitors such as Russia and China are seeking to overtake the U.S. in engines However the current U.S. advantage is sustainable if it is treated as a national priority Many military aircraft especially fighters require engines with important differences from commercial aircraft They fly different flight profiles and perform different jobs These differences mean that while DoD can leverage the commercial engine industrial base it must also make investments to sustain the industrial base's unique military components In the next few years DoD investment in military engines is projected to decrease significantly particularly for R D This presents a challenge as military unique engineering skills are highly perishable Four major policy choices confront DoD as it formulates its investment approach to military engines going forward 1 Priority 2 Resources 3 Business Model and 4 Competition The DoD is at an inflection point for engine investment and the time for choosing on these four key policy questions will come in the next few years
