Henry Ford's Plan for the American Suburb Heather Barrow,2018-10-29 Around Detroit suburbanization was led by Henry Ford who not only located a massive factory over the city's border in Dearborn but also was the first industrialist to make the automobile a mass consumer item So suburbanization in the 1920s was spurred simultaneously by the migration of the automobile industry and the mobility of automobile users A welfare capitalist Ford was a leader on many fronts he raised wages increased leisure time and transformed workers into consumers and he was the most effective at making suburbs an intrinsic part of American life The decade was dominated by this new political economy also known as Fordism linking mass production and consumption The rise of Dearborn demonstrated that Fordism was connected to mass suburbanization as well Ultimately Dearborn proved to be a model that was repeated throughout the nation as people of all classes relocated to suburbs shifting away from central cities Mass suburbanization was a national phenomenon Yet the example of Detroit is an important baseline since the trend was more discernable there than elsewhere Suburbanization however was never a simple matter of outlying communities growing in parallel with cities Instead resources were diverted from central cities as they were transferred to the suburbs The example of the Detroit metropolis asks whether the mass suburbanization which originated there represented the American dream and if so by whom and at what cost This book will appeal to those interested in cities and suburbs American studies technology and society political economy working class culture welfare state systems transportation race relations and business management The United States Karl Baedeker (Firm),1904

EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT AND SUSTAINABILITY Robert O. Schneider, 2015-09-01 Emergency managers are faced with natural and human made problems that are constantly evolving and changing the footprints of disaster The complexity of these problems is more than matched by the complexity of the physical and social systems that emergency managers are expected to understand as they offer solutions for the recurring disaster problems that are presented to them in the normal course of their work The technical skills and capacities that emergency managers have developed over time as they have plied their trade are impressive and increasingly effective and have never been more important But they are not nearly enough to keep pace with or manage hazard risks and disasters Something else is needed This transformation the something else if you will is a necessity to assure emergency managers that disasters both natural and man made will never exceed our capacities to manage effectively This transformation which if successfully completed better enables whole communities to take responsibility for disasters is needed to promote hazard resilience in particular and sustainable communities in general There is a need for a worldview that comprehends the connections between hazard threats disaster resilience and sustainability The purpose of this book is to define emergency management as a profession something that has been discussed much in recent years but not brought to a satisfactory completion The linkage of emergency management to sustainability i e the defining of it as a sustainability profession is presented as the necessary linkage that potentially orients all of the professional skill development and the work of the trade and transforms it into a profession assistance to the tribes of Libya the threat that Germany would get her hands on the Russian Black Sea Fleet and use it in the Mediterranean and the appearance and influence of the Americans in 1918 all took place against a background of rivalry between the Allies which frustrated the appointment of Jellicoe in 1918 as supreme command at sea in a role similar to that of Foch on land Long and Short Haul United States. Department of State, 1948 International Record of Medicine and General Practice Clinics Frank Pierce Foster, 1897 From the Primaries to the Polls Thomas Gangale, 2007-12-30 America's presidential nominating process is inherently unfair and exclusive yielding undue weight and privilege to the states that vote in the earliest rounds More and more states are beating down the door to vote earlier trying to redress the inequity on a state by state basis In the ensuing free for all the presidential primary schedule has become so front loaded that the anointed front runner with the biggest war chest in each of the major parties is the de facto nominee The primaries are becoming mere noise and pageantry as the national conventions have been for several decades From the Primaries to the Polls describes the problem and proposes the solution The American Plan is designed to begin with contests in small population states where candidates do not need millions of dollars to compete and a wide field of presidential hopefuls can be competitive in the early going A minor candidate's surprise success in early rounds based on merit rather than money tends to attract money from larger numbers of small contributors for the campaign to spend in later rounds of primaries Keeping more candidates in the race longer to challenge the front runners prevents a rush to judgment and permits more voters across the country to select from a diverse field As the campaign proceeds over ten two week intervals of primaries and caucuses on a semi randomized schedule the aggregate value of contested states becomes successively larger requiring the expenditure of larger amounts of money in order to campaign effectively A more gradual weeding out process occurs allowing a clear winner to emerge only after the full spectrum of candidates has been in play nationally The American Hebrew, 1926 Fifteenth Census of the United States, 1930: Employment and wages in the retail industry (trade series) 1933-1934 ; Apparel retailing
