Inflammation and Stroke Giora Z. Feuerstein, 2012-12-06 Stroke is a leading cause of death in developed countries However current therapeutic strategies for stroke have been largely unsuccessful One possible explanation is that research and pharmacological management have focused on very early events in brain ischemia New research has shown that brain ischemia and trauma elicit strong inflammatory reactions driven by both external and brain cells The recognition of inflammation as a fundamental response to brain ischemia provides novel opportunities for new anti inflammatory therapies For the first time an international body of researchers presents the latest findings about the cellular and humoral aspects of immune and inflammatory reactions in the brain The work may have an impact on the treatment of neuroinjuries and ancillary brain diseases and increase the understanding of the roles infections and immune reactions play in the brain milieu

Vascular Endothelium John D. Catravas, Allan D. Callow, Una S. Ryan, 2012-12-06 This book is a compilation of the lectures and oral and poster communications presented at the Advanced Study Institute on Vascular Endothelium Physiological Basis of Clinical Problems II which took place between June 20 and 30 1992 in Rhodes Greece This third in a series of ASIs on vascular endothelium continued on the theme of the first 1988 ASI on Receptors and Transduction Mechanisms and particularly expanded that of the 1990 conference on Physiological Basis of Clinical Problems We continued the successful practice of bringing together clinicians and scientists this was reflected equally well in the composition of the organizing committee as in the background of the participants Endothelial cell functions and dysfunctions present as many challenges to the investigator as they do to the curious clinical practitioner As these problems are necessarily different this unique ten day co habitation of these individuals continued to offer fresh outlooks to each stimulated potential collaborative efforts and most importantly advanced ever so slightly our knowledge of vascular biology

This year's conference was further enriched by the presence of several of our colleagues from Eastern Europe whom we are delighted to welcome as officially sponsored participants to this and future NATO supported meetings. It is never superfluous to remind readers and participants that those signing at the bottom of this page while responsible for many of the ASI's and the book's deficiencies are but three of the many contributors to the successes.

Oxford Textbook of Neurologic and Neuropsychiatric Epidemiology Carol Brayne, Valery Feigin, Lenore Launer, Giancarlo Logroscino, 2021. Neurologic and neuropsychiatric disorders are of great importance to societies and they also raise special considerations in epidemiological research methodology. Not only do neurologic and neuropsychiatric disorders form a major group of disorders associated with ageing populations but those disorders that occur in earlier life can be associated with severe individual, family and societal distress and burden. The interrelationship of syndromes and disorders is a topic of major interest and growing biological insights across psychiatry and neurology. This includes not only overlaps in neurodegenerative syndromes but also those related to other systems such as metabolic, inflammatory, immune and vascular disorders. Part of the Oxford Textbooks in Clinical Neurology series, the Oxford Textbook of Neurologic and Neuropsychiatric Epidemiology is designed to focus on the overlaps and interrelationships between neuro-epidemiological disorders as well as on ways to harmonise large cohort studies to maximise opportunities for determining causes related to rarer disorders. Divided into three main parts, the book covers: 1. the principles of neurologic and neuropsychiatric epidemiology; 2. specific neuropsychiatric disorders and their interrelationships; and 3. the implications of neuro-epidemiologic research for patient populations and current medical practice. This comprehensive work serves as an invaluable reference to current neuro-epidemiological methods for neurologists, psychiatrists and senior trainees in those disciplines as well as public health practitioners and students with an interest in neurology and neuropsychiatry.
