Primary agricultural cooperatives in Malawi: Structure, conduct, and performance Davis, Kristin, Kazembe, Cynthia, Benson, Todd, De Weerd, Joachim, Duchoslav, Jan, 2023-05-23 Primary agricultural cooperatives in Malawi in contrast to other farmer level organizations have legal status and can own assets borrow money for their operations and sign contracts making it easier for them to do business for the profit of their members Conceptually such cooperatives enable their member farmers to achieve economies of scale for their commercial activities By joining together in a cooperative members can obtain commercial inputs at lower prices closer to wholesale prices than if they purchased the inputs as individuals In selling their output by aggregating their crops and other products into larger lots that the cooperative then negotiates to sell on their behalf buyers can achieve greater efficiency in buying from them and can be expected to offer a premium over the prices that they would offer farmers selling those products individually Cooperatives can also serve farmers in providing an important channel for obtaining information and advice to increase their productivity and the profitability of their farming Moreover by joining together to achieve common objectives in primary agricultural cooperatives member farmers can exercise greater influence on local and national policy issues of concern to them while also building social cohesion solidarity and trust within their communities Market Structure, Conduct and Performance David E. the firm and of elementary econometrics I have endeavoured to write this book so that someone with only a one year course in economics behind them could follow the line of argument. But without a further study of micro economics they would miss the significance of some parts of the argument and without knowledge of econometrics would have to take many of the empirical results on trust. In writing this book limitation on space and a natural inclination have led to an emphasis on providing t

Local Foods Meet Global Foodways Benjamin Lawrance, Carolyn de la Peña, 2013-09-13 This book explores the intersection of food and foodways from global and local perspectives. The collection contributes to interdisciplinary debates about the role and movement of commodities in the historical and contemporary world. The expert contributions collectively address a fundamental tension in the emerging scholarly terrain of food studies: namely, theorizing the relationship between foodstuff production and cuisine patterns. They explore a wide variety of topics including curry, bread, sugar, coffee, milk, pulque, Virginia ham, fast food, obesity and US ethnic restaurants. Local Foods Meet Global Foodways considers movements in context and in doing so complicates the notions that food shapes culture as it crosses borders or that culture adapts foods to its neo-local or global contexts. By analysing the dynamics of contact between mobile foods and/or people and the specific cultures of consumption, they provoke these case studies reveal the process whereby local foods become global or global foods become local to be a dynamic co-creative development jointly facilitated by humans and nature. This volume explores a vast expanse of global regions such as North and Central America, Europe, China, East Asia and the Pacific, India, sub-Saharan Africa, the Atlantic Ocean and the USSR, Russia. It includes a foreword by the eminent food scholar Carole Counihan and an afterword by noted theorist of cuisine Rachel Laudan and will be of great interest to students and researchers of history, anthropology, geography, cultural studies and American studies. This book is based on a special issue of Food and Foodways
