Transforming Curriculum Through Teacher-Learner Partnerships Nair, Pradeep,Keppell, Michael James,Lim, Chee Leong,Mari, TamilSalvi,Hassan, Nurhanim,2020-12-11 Empowering learners for life requires a fundamental shift in higher education curriculum design New priorities pedagogies technologies spaces and assessment strategies are required to enable learners to take ownership of their learning Student centeredness concepts are still prescriptive in nature as most decisions on curriculum assessment teaching and learning approaches are still teacher centric Teachers are developing student centered learning environments without the involvement of the learners in the planning decision making and or design process In addition some lecturers are still practicing the traditional approaches of content delivery and conventional assessment methods rather than experimenting with innovative practices suited for student centered approaches Therefore there is an ongoing need for research focused on the importance and effectiveness of a paradigm shift in education that involves student teacher partnerships fueled by innovative teaching and learning designs where students take an active role and contribute as partners in learning Transforming Curriculum Through Teacher Learner Partnerships captures experiences and evidence among teachers in exploring the possibility of active student participation in curriculum design delivery and assessment through teacher learner partnership The chapters address issues of teacher learner partnerships in designing the

Comparative research on higher education in developing and transitional countries is often focused on such issues as access finance student mobility and the impact of globalization but there has been little attention to curriculum and the forces that shape it Confronting Challenges to the Liberal Arts Curriculum fills an important gap in the literature by examining the context content challenges and successes of implementing liberal arts coursework within undergraduate curriculum In order to fully understand the place of liberal education in each location chapter authors have employed a wide lens to investigate the influences upon curricular content in China India Mexico Pakistan Poland Russia South Africa and Turkey Thus this volume explores how curricular content is decided how educational programs are being structured and whether countries are viewing higher education as more than just the preparation of students for specialized knowledge By providing detailed case studies of these countries at crucial transition points in their higher education systems each chapter outlines the state of higher education system and the government's role the impact of imported models the presence of a liberal education the curricular formation and best examples of successful programs Ultimately this volume depicts how global influences have come to rest in developing countries and how market forces far removed from faculty and students have shaped the undergraduate curriculum This valuable book is of interest to scholars and researchers in Higher Education as well as practitioners working to foster student and faculty exchange and raise awareness of curricular issues The Student-centered Classroom Handbook: Secondary social studies Bil Johnson, 2003 First Published in 2003 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company Resources in Education , 2001-10 From Teach For America to Teach
