Advances in Quaternary Entomology Scott A. Elias, 2009-08-18 Advances in Quaternary Entomology addresses the science of fossil insects by demonstrating their immense contribution to our knowledge of the paleoenvironmental and climatological record of the past 2.6 million years. In this comprehensive survey of the field, Scott A. Elias recounts development of scholarship, reviews the fossil insect record from Quaternary deposits throughout the world, and points to rewarding areas for future research. The study of Quaternary entomology is becoming an important tool in understanding past environmental changes. Most insects are quite specific as to habitat requirements, and those in non-island environments have undergone almost no evolutionary change in the Quaternary period. We therefore can use their modern ecological requirements as a basis for interpreting what past environments must have been like. Describes and identifies principal characteristics of fossil insect groups of the Quaternary period. Ties Quaternary insect studies to the larger field of paleoecology. Offers global coverage of the subject with specific regional examples. Illustrates specific methods and procedures for conducting research in Quaternary Entomology. Offers unique insight into overlying trends and broader implications of Quaternary climate change based on insect life of the period. Excavations at St. James's Priory, Bristol Reg Jackson, 2006. The Benedictine Priory of St James was established just outside the medieval city of Bristol in 1129 AD. Two areas were excavated: Site 1 to the east of the Priory church and Site 2 to the west. The Priory was largely destroyed during the Dissolution of 1540, but the area around Site 1 remained in use during the 17th and 18th centuries as housing was built there. Site 2 was in use from the late Saxon period to the 20th century. This publication presents the results of excavations carried out at Site 1 from 1989 and 1995 and from Site 2 from 1994 and 95, along with those obtained from a watching brief kept during landscaping work in 1997. There are also specific chapters on finds and burials. Castles, Town Defences, and Artillery Fortifications in Britain: 1983-1989 John R. Kenyon, 1978. Maritime Celts, Frisians and Saxons Sean McGrail, 1990. The Shapwick Project, Somerset Christopher M. Gerrard, Michael Aston, 2007. Accompanying CD-ROM contains appendices. CD-ROM label: The Water Supplies and Related Structures of Roman Britain Alfonso Burgers, 2001. The supply of unpolluted water was of high priority throughout the Roman Empire, and in Britain as elsewhere, organised water supplies played a fundamental role in the development of forts, settlements, and towns. This detailed and highly informative study gathers evidence from over 800 archaeological sites, including remains of aqueducts, wells, baths, drains, pipes, springs, and tanks. Sections examine the validity of the data and the need to reclassify many sites due to their water features, which have been neglected in the past. Burgers also looks at the logistics of designing and building the Roman water supply system, the engineering principles involved, the distribution of water-related features in Roman Britain, and social and financial aspects of their construction and use. The database is presented in table format. The Archaeology of Taunton Peter E. Leach, 1984. Decorated Medieval Floor Tiles of Somerset Barbara J. Lowe, 2003. This book is a catalogue of

Techniques of Archaeological Excavation Philip Barker,2003-09-02 First published in 1993 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company The Archaeology of the Upper City and Adjacent Suburbs Kate Steane,2006 This volume contains reports on sites excavated in the upper walled city at Lincoln and adjacent suburbs between 1972 and 1987 The project included large scale excavations which yielded some stunning finds and revealed considerable information about several periods of the city s history Each site is described in turn incorporating stratigraphic artefactual and environmental information and the common threads are brought together in a general discussion The excavators found remains of the defences of the Roman fortress Roman houses and the legionary headquarters whose site was subsequently converted into a civic precinct There were traces of occupation in the Early Saxon period while the area outside the west gate has produced more pottery of the Mid Saxon period c 650 c 850 than any other in the city Although there was renewed activity from the 10th century full urbanisation of the upper city may not have happened until the late 11th century There were already several churches before the Cathedral was begun in 1072 and the sequence of that at St Paul in the Bail is set out in detail Several smaller excavations provided evidence for industrial activities such as malting quarrying and bell casting Structural and artefactual evidence for the post medieval period also give a flavour of the local life style in the 16th 18th centuries This work forms a companion volume to those on Wigford and the Brayford Pool LAS 2 and The Lower Walled City LAS 4 The Archaeological Institute at Taunton ,1879 The Archaeology of Wigford and the Brayford Pool Kate Steane,Margaret J. Darling,2001 The suburb of Wigford lies near the heart of the historic city of Lincoln Before excavations began in 1972 nothing was known of the prehistory of the area and so the arrival of the Roman army represented the first historic event This volume publishes the results of the excavation of several sites made possible by a series of urban development schemes Each of the excavations differed in the extent and depth of the stratigraphy uncovered and each belonged to a different period from the Iron Age to post medieval
