The Arc Of The Storm:

The Electrician ,1906 Meteorology of Flood-producing Storms in the Mississippi River Basin George A. Lott,1956 This report is primarily concerned with intensive precipitation falling as rain over the central part of the Mississippi River Basin during the months of January through July Other precipitation in the Basin is relatively ineffective in producing floods on the main stem Snow melt is not negligible in Mississippi floods but has never been the primary cause of a historical Lower Mississippi flood Major floods are not experienced from August to December because the ground dried during the summer has an accumulated capacity to soak up water any hypothetical flood between August and December would be overshadowed for design purposes by a hypothetical flood of the same likelihood of occurrence between January and July The latter would be drastically more severe Proceedings of the American Society of Civil Engineers American Society of Civil Engineers,1928 Proceedings ,1928 Project Stormfury United States.
