Strong Medicine Creating Incentives For Pharmaceutical Research On Neglected Diseases:

Strong Medicine Michael Kremer, Rachel Glennerster, 2016-05-31 From Nobel Prize winning economist Michael Kremer and fellow leading development economist Rachel Glennerster an innovative solution for providing vaccines in poor countries Millions of people in the third world die from diseases that are rare in the first world diseases like malaria tuberculosis and schistosomiasis AIDS which is now usually treated in rich countries still ravages the world's poor Vaccines offer the best hope for controlling these diseases and could dramatically improve health in poor countries But developers have little incentive to undertake the costly and risky research needed to develop vaccines This is partly because the potential consumers are poor but also because governments drive down prices In Strong Medicine Michael Kremer and Rachel Glennerster offer an innovative yet simple solution to this worldwide problem Pull programs to stimulate research Here's how such programs would work Funding agencies would commit to purchase viable vaccines if and when they were developed This would create the incentives for vaccine developers to produce usable products for these neglected diseases Private firms rather than funding agencies would pick which research strategies to pursue After purchasing the vaccine funders could distribute it at little or no cost to the afflicted countries Strong Medicine details just how these legally binding commitments would work Ultimately if no vaccines were developed such a commitment would cost nothing But if vaccines were developed the program would save millions of lives and would be among the world's most cost effective health interventions

Creating R&D Incentives for Medicines for Neglected Diseases Frank Müller-Langer, 2009-09-30 Virtually no research is targeted at developing medicines for tropical diseases as the expected market returns from R D into these diseases in the private pharmaceuticals sector are too low Frank Müller-Langer addresses the market failure with respect to R D for medicines for tropical diseases and the lack of short term access to affordable medicines in poor countries The author analyzes additional push and pull mechanisms to stimulate R D for pharmaceutical products alongside patent protection which may help mitigate the problem of those consumers in poor countries who lack access to affordable medicines Furthermore he reasons that a global regime of banning parallel trade from low income countries to high income countries is desirable from a developing country's perspective

The Economics of US Healthcare: Competition, Innovation, Regulation, and Organizations Stigler Center, 2023-05-01 This eBook was born out of a general diagnosis that the US healthcare sector is not only one of the most studied industries in economics but also one of the areas where the field can make the most progress Indeed the American healthcare industry has many features that are particularly attractive to economists It is one of if not the largest sectors of the US economy accounting for almost 20% of the national Gross Domestic Product and employing tens of millions of workers Firms range from large conglomerates to small providers and there is strong government private sector interaction with federal state and local governments shaping policy The industry also has many failures is undergoing tremendous change and produces a wealth of data even if not always perfectly formatted The field however is far from saturated Healthcare is such a complex and intricate sector one where details matter so much that it is almost its own subfield of economics These high barriers to entry prevent scholars from researching healthcare topics and weaken the cross pollination of ideas an increasing hallmark of many other areas This is problematic not the least because any major advances in healthcare economics literally save lives and billions of dollars This project aimed to help lower these barriers and kick start broader collaborations

Incentives for Global Public Health Thomas Pogge, Matthew Rimmer, Kim Rubenstein, 2010-06-24 This portrait of the global debate over patent law and access to essential medicines focuses on public health concerns about HIV AIDS malaria tuberculosis the SARS virus influenza and diseases of poverty The essays explore the diplomatic negotiations and disputes in key international fora such as the World Trade Organization the World Health Organization and the World Intellectual Property Organization Drawing upon international trade law innovation policy intellectual property law health law human rights and philosophy the authors seek to canvass policy solutions which encourage and reward worthwhile pharmaceutical innovation while ensuring affordable access to advanced medicines A number of creative policy options are critically assessed including the development of a Health Impact Fund prizes for medical innovation the use of patent pools open source drug development and forms of creative capitalism

The Management of Innovation Alberto Galasso, 2024-05-01 Despite the importance of innovation for the growth of firms industries and the national economy the strategic tools available to effectively manage and create new technologies are often neglected by entrepreneurs and corporate managers The Management of Innovation examines how firms can leverage and create technology capital Over the past two decades economists and management scholars have developed several new insights into how large companies and startups can be more innovative. Many of these research findings have not yet reached management practice. Alberto Galasso aims to address this issue by providing an accessible overview of the innovation literature and a discussion of the latest research findings. The analysis considers the two key stages of the innovation process: technology management and technology creation. Each stage involves complex managerial decisions related to resource allocation and the assessment of relevant costs and benefits. This book examines the most frequent trade offs that shape the innovation process across these two stages. It also provides an introduction to intellectual property and patent analytics. The Management of Innovation provides MBA students and practitioners with tools and insights to innovate successfully.

The Oxford Handbook of International Organizations

Jacob Katz Cogan, Ian Hurd, Ian Johnstone, 2016-11-24. Virtually every important question of public policy today involves an international organization. From trade to intellectual property to health policy and beyond, governments interact with international organizations in almost everything they do. Increasingly, individual citizens are directly affected by the work of international organizations. Aimed at academics, students, practitioners, and lawyers, this book gives a comprehensive overview of the world of international organizations today. It emphasizes both the practical aspects of their organization and operation and the conceptual issues that arise at the junctures between nation states and international authority and between law and politics. While the focus is on intergovernmental organizations, the book also encompasses non-governmental organizations and public policy networks. With essays by the leading scholars and practitioners, the book first considers the main international organizations and the kinds of problems they address. This includes chapters on the organizations that relate to trade, humanitarian aid, peace operations, and more, as well as chapters on the history of international organizations. The book then looks at the constituent parts and internal functioning of international organizations. This addresses the internal management of the organization and includes chapters on the distribution of decision-making power within the organizations, the structure of their assemblies, the role of Secretaries General, and other heads, budgets, and finance, and other elements of complex bureaucracies at the international level. This book is essential reading for scholars, practitioners, and students alike.

Greenprint Aaditya Mattoo, Arvind Subramanian, 2013. International cooperation on climate change has floundered. With mutual recrimination between rich and poor countries, the zero-sum arithmetic of a shrinking global carbon budget, and shifting economic and bargaining power from old CO<sub>2</sub> emitters to new, what Aaditya Mattoo and Arvind Subramanian call the narrative adding up, and new world problems, the wonder is not the current impasse but belief that progress might be possible at all. Each of these problems must be addressed in a radically different way. First, the old narrative of recrimination must give way to a narrative based on recognition of common interests. Second, leaders must shift the focus away from cutting emissions to generating technology. Third, the old cash-for-cuts approach must be abandoned for one that requires contributions from each country calibrated in magnitude and form to its current level of development and future prospects.
