Structural Adjustment And The African Farmer:

Structural Adjustment and the African Farmer Alex Duncan, 1992 Structural Adjustment and the African Farmer
: Edited by Alex Duncan : Edited by John Howell , 1990 Structural Adjustment & the African Farmer Alex Duncan, John Howell, 1992 This book traces the impact of structural adjustment policies upon the incomes and welfare of Africa's peasant farmers who currently operate at very low levels of productivity of both land and labour and are confronted with low household income and inadequate food security A common method has been applied across five countries Analyses have been made of the links between national economic policies and the various markets in which the smallholders operate and the services and infrastructures which influence their productive capacities There are differences in the resource base and the level of ecological deterioration in export opportunities in physical infrastructure and in particular in the depth and nature of economic policy reforms The team have recognised the important differences between these five countries and overcome the formidable problems of collecting agricultural data in Africa The book provides firm evidence of the impact both positive and negative of structural adjustment The editors argue for a more targeted project specific approach to small farmer development This complements the current donor interest in policy related aid support Structural Adjustment and Agriculture Sreenivasan Subramanian, Elisabeth Sadoulet, Alain De Janvry, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 1994-01-01 Adjustment and Agriculture in Africa J. Clapp, 1997-03-05 With the adoption of a World Bank sponsored structural adjustment programme in the mid 1980s Guinea underwent a dramatic change in its economic and agricultural policies The country's experience over the past decade illustrates some of the most pressing problems encountered by African countries pursuing economic reform This book analyses these difficulties by examining the adjustment experience in Guinea as it affected the country's overall political economy and the agricultural sector in particular It also places this case within the broader context of African adjustment Structural Adjustment and African Women Farmers Christina H. Gladwin, 1991 Africa's Changing Agricultural Development Strategies Christopher L.
Delgado, 1995 Similarities and dominant paradigms Chronology and elements of the dominant paradigms of agricultural development Insights for paradigms of African Agricultural Development Globalization and Autocentricity in Africa's Development in the 21st Century Kidane Mengisteab, 1996 African economies are the most dependent and the most marginalised in the global system Prevailing policies to integrate these economies more closely with the global economy are in the view of many misplaced and this work presents a series of alternative strategies that will tap the energies of the African people to develop their own potential and reduce their dependence on World Bank IMF led approaches Agriculture, Autonomous Development, and Prospects for Industrialization in Africa Emmanuel Ndhlovu, 2025-03-06 The book investigates the intersection of agriculture and development in Africa and how it impacts rural industrialisation prospects It provides a comprehensive view of the position of agriculture in African socio economic activities and the agricultural sector's potential as the source for continental development and industrialisation prospects. Significant research has been done on African development with a focus placed on the problematic role played by slavery, colonialism and later by incompetent African leaders who failed to steer development of the type that delivers a progressive, sustained and sustainable transformation of lives and societies. There is limited focus on the possibility of agriculture being the potential basis of African development and the chance for industrialisation. This is a matter of concern considering the dominance of agriculture as a livelihood and income source for many people on the continent. In contributing to the debate on development in Africa, this book aims to show how agriculture can serve as the basis for African development and industrialisation. This will be achieved by i) providing a detailed historical description of the position of agriculture in African socio-economic activities, ii) outlining the trajectory of African development with a focus on agriculture innovation and mechanisation, iii) identifying challenges to the development of African agriculture, iv) exploring the opportunities for agricultural development in Africa and v) providing practical and policy recommendations to improve African agriculture and make it the engine for development and industrialisation. Utilising a multidisciplinary approach which combines political economy, social policy, financial inclusion and empowerment approaches, the book also shows how engagement of youth and women, digitalisation and the provision of support by public and private actors can jump start agriculture as the engine of African development and industrialisation. Taken together with this conscious effort to promote a multi-disciplinary discussion, the book is valuable reading for students, policymakers and activists interested in emerging new directions in African development thinking and research.

African Economies in Transition Jo Ann Paulson, 2016-07-27. An authoritative assessment of the reform efforts in African economies during the 1980s and early 1990s with the focus on economic liberalization in those socialist countries which began from a position of pervasive state intervention. A companion theoretical volume 0 333 66545 7 examines the changing role of the state during the period of transition. This volume examines the important debate on agricultural reforms in the period and provides in-depth country studies of the transition economies covering Congo, Madagascar, Tanzania and the impact of war on transition in Angola and Mozambique. These books are the first in an important new series in association with the Centre for the Study of African Economies, University of Oxford.

African Farmers, Value Chains and Agricultural Development Alan de Brauw, Erwin Bulte, 2021-11-02. This book provides a thorough introduction to and examination of agricultural value chains in Sub-Saharan Africa. First, the authors introduce the economic theory of agri-food value chains and value chain governance focusing on domestic and regional trade in and consumption of food crops in a low-income country context. In addition to mainstream and heterodox thinking about value chain development, the book pays attention to political economy considerations. The book also reviews the empirical evidence on value chain development and performance in Africa. It adopts multiple lenses to examine agricultural value chains, zooming out from the micro level e.g. relational contracting in a context of market imperfections to the meso level e.g. distributional implications of various value chain interventions inclusion of specific social groups and the macro level underlying income population and urbanization trends volumes and prices etc Furthermore this book places value chain development in the context of a process the authors refer to as structural transformation 2 0 which refers to a process where production factors labor land and capital move from low productivity agriculture to high productivity agriculture Finally throughout the book the authors interpret the evidence in light of three important debates i how competitive are rural factor and product markets and what does this imply for distribution and innovation ii what role do foreign investment and factor proportions play in the development of agri food value chains in Africa iii what complementary government policies can help facilitate a process of agricultural value chain transformation towards high productive activities and enhancing the capacity of value chains to generate employment opportunities and food security for a growing population

Subcommittee on International Development, Finance, Trade, and Monetary Policy,1991 Transforming Capitalism and Patriarchy April A. Gordon,1996 Gordon analyzes the interplay between capitalism development and the status of African women Drawing on the work of both African and Western researchers she shows that capitalist development projects have mainly benefited a small stratum of African elites and proposes concrete strategies for making it more equitable for women Africa's Green Revolution William G. Moseley,Matthew A. Schnurr,Rachel Bezner-Kerr,2017-10-02 This volume examines the dominant neoliberal agenda for agricultural development and hunger alleviation in Africa The text reviews the history of African agricultural and food security policy in the post colonial period across a range of geographical contexts in order to contextualise the productionist approach embedded in the much heralded New Green Revolution for Africa This strategy supported by a range of international agencies promotes the use of hybrid seeds fertilisers and pesticides to boost crop production This approach is underpinned by a new and unprecedented level of public private partnerships as donors actively work to promote the private sector and build links between African farmers input suppliers agro dealers agro processors and retailers On the consumer end increased supermarket penetration into poorer neighbourhoods is proffered as a solution to urban food insecurity The chapters in this volume complicate understandings of this new approach and raise serious questions about its effectiveness as a strategy for increasing food production and alleviating poverty across the continent This book is based on a special issue of African Geographical Review
