These observations form the foundation for lessons that build on what students know. Informal Assessment Strategies addresses the three fundamental components of successful teaching and learning: asking questions that engage students as they investigate, theorize, communicate, share, and reflect on their learning; observing students as they interact with others; participate in lessons and complete assignments; planning well thought out lessons that reflect an awareness of the curriculum; what a student can do; what the student needs to know next; and how the student and teacher measure success. With student and teacher reflections sprinkled throughout, this highly readable book is rooted in the life of the classroom. It shows teachers how to foster true engagement and nurture students who are involved, aware, and excited about their learning.

How to run a video study Manfred Prenzel, 2005. The main goal of the IPN Video Study is to systematically describe and analyse physics instruction and to investigate its relevance for understanding oriented learning in the classroom. In the first phase of the IPN Video Study, various guidelines and instruments for data collection were developed and published. In the second phase of the project, a more elaborated approach was realised. This technical report provides an overview of all the tools and methods used in this study. It shows how to run a video study that analyses patterns of instruction and their impact on cognitive as well as motivational/affective learning outcomes. The report includes the documentation of the organisation and realisation of the IPN Video Study. In addition, it provides standardised guidelines for collecting video tapes. Moreover, the technical report presents standardised guidelines for the transcription of video tapes and describes the observation and coding procedures in detail. Finally, this volume reports scale documentations of all tests and questionnaires.

Ethnography and Education Policy Claudia Matus, 2019-06-27. This book addresses the relationship between the production of social problems in educational policy, the research practices required to inform policy, and the daily production of normalcies and differences in school contexts. It reports on the opportunities and consequences for policy research and practice when normalcy is stigmatized at the same level as difference. The book employs a critical analysis combining queer feminist and post-representational theories to understand the implications of dominant ways of understanding the division between normal and different subjectivities and how they reiterate structures of inequality in schools.

Teaching the Educable Mentally Retarded Robert A. Sedlak, Denise M. Sedlak, 1985-10-01. Robert and Denise Sedlak are noted for their work with mentally retarded young people. Teaching the Educable Mentally Retarded combines their training and experience to create an invaluable resource for both the practicing and beginning teacher of mildly retarded students. Practical suggestions, case studies, and real life anecdotes are interwoven with research findings. The result is an up to date comprehensive guide to handling the expected and unexpected situations teachers confront in the classroom. The book incorporates current trends in education, featuring sections on the use of instructional aides in the classroom and on the use of computers and other teaching technology in special education classes. The authors' style is clear and easy to follow, and the work is enhanced through the copious use of charts and figures.
