Architecture: Arthur Erickson

Contemporary Pavilions for a Bluff in Puget Sound

ARTHUR ERICKSON has consistently pursued regional architecture with a profound insight. By combining deep empathy for a site and the needs of his clients with his own palette of universal shapes and principles, he creates an architecture that is genuinely of a place, not a vernacular cliché. For a Washington State couple, Erickson has designed a house that is a marked departure from his usual style. But in finding a solution that was appropriate for the rural hilltop site, Erickson remained faithful to his longtime belief that good architecture is a process of discovery, not slavish devotion to preconceived notions. The final result is regional too with meaning.

The residents had approached Erickson on the advice of architect friends and a son who had seen Erickson's famous Simon Fraser University near Vancouver. They were immediately impressed by Erickson's willingness to listen to their sugges-
