Surfeit Of Guns:

The Detective as Historian Ray Browne, Lawrence Kreiser, 2009-03-26 Deeper understanding of history is enhanced by encasing it in art and interest Crime fiction is one of the widest and most rapidly growing forms of literature Historical crime fiction serves effectively the double purpose of entertaining while it teaches The truth of the narrative account the editors of this volume believe is dependent on the understanding of human nature reflected in the author who writes the narrative Historical crime fiction the editors of this volume write has an obligation and a golden opportunity It must bring the past up to the present through the device of timeless crime and it must take the reader into the world about which is being written so that the characters are alive and the events interesting and challenging Professional writers of fiction need to be more effective than mere authors of dates and assumed motivations Therefore they can fill in human motivations and drives where no records exist and can aid the professional historians in what historian David Thelen calls the challenge of history which is to recover the past and interpret it for the present The essays in this volume accept the challenge and make major accomplishments for meeting it

Making Peoples: A History of the New Zealanders From Polynesian James Belich, 2007-05-07 A new paperback reprint of this best selling and ground breaking history When first published in 1996 Making Peoples was hailed as redefining New Zealand history It was undoubtedly the most important work of New Zealand history since Keith Sinclair's classic A History of New Zealand Making Peoples covers the period from first settlement to the end of the nineteenth century Part one covers Polynesian background Maori settlement and pre contact history Part two looks at Maori European relations to 1900 Part three discusses Pakeha colonisation and settlement James Belich's Making Peoples is a major work which reshapes our understanding of New Zealand history challenges traditional views and debunks many myths while also recognising the value of myths as historical forces Many of its assertions are new and controversial

Making Peoples James Belich, 2002-02-28 Now in paper This immensely readable book full of drama and humor as well as scholarship is a watershed in the writing of New Zealand history In making many new assertions and challenging many historical myths it seeks to reinterpret our approach to the past Given New Zealand's small population short history and great isolation the history of the archipelago has been saddled with a reputation for mundanity According to James Belich however it is just these characteristics that make New Zealand a historian's paradise a laboratory whose isolation size and recency is an advantage in which the grand themes of world history are often played out more rapidly more separately and therefore more discernably than elsewhere The first of two planned volumes Making Peoples begins with the Polynesian settlement and its development into the Maori tribes in the eleventh century It traces the great encounter between independent Maoridom and expanding Europe from 1642 to 1916 including the foundation of the Pakeha the neo Europeans of New Zealand between the 1830s and the 1880s It describes the forging of a neo Polynesia and a neo Britain and the traumatic interaction between them The author carefully examines the myths and realities that drove the colonialization process and suggests a new living version of one of the most critical and controversial documents in New Zealand's history the Treaty of Waitangi frequently described as New Zealand's Magna Carta The construction of peoples Maori and Pakeha is a recurring theme the response of each to the great shift from extractive to sustainable economics their relationship with their Hawaikis or ancestors with each other and with myth Essential reading for anyone interested in New Zealand history and in the history of new societies in general The Global War on Your Guns Wayne R. government the armaments industry based in the wartime capital Chongqing The author argues that China's arsenal workers participated in three interlocked conflicts between 1937 and 1953 a war of national liberation a civil war and a class war The work adds to the scholarship on the Chinese revolution which has previously focused primarily on rural China showing how workers alienation from the military officers directing the arsenals eroded the legitimacy of the Nationalist regime and how the Communists mobilized working class support in Chongqing Moreover in emphasizing the urban working class and nationalist components of the 1949 revolution the author demonstrates the multiple sources of workers identities and thus challenges previous studies that have exclusively stressed workers particularistic or regional identities A Scourge of
