Surimi and Surimi Seafood Jae Won Park, 2016 Surimi and surimi seafood products were originated in Japan several hundred years ago and their modern production technology has been professionally documented since the 1950s The book covers the basic science of surimi fish proteins and contains updates on fisheries and the market. It reviews a wide range of surimi seafood manufacturing technologies. It discusses quality assessment, quality control, development, and nutrition technology. Surimi and Surimi Seafood Jae W. Park, 2013-11-12. Originating in Japan in the twelfth century, surimi is refined fish myofibrillar proteins produced through various processes. The development of the surimi product, crabstick, in Japan in the 1970s played a major role in globalizing surimi and expanding surimi seafood consumption to the United States, Europe, and Russia. Commercial surimi production The Seafood Industry Linda Ankenman Granata, George J. Flick, Jr., Roy E. Martin, 2012-05-01. The Seafood Industry Species Products Processing and Safety, Second Edition, is a completely updated and contemporary revision of Flick and Martin's classic publication, The Seafood Industry, Covering all aspects of the commercial fish and shellfish industries from harvest through consumption, the book thoroughly describes the commercial fishery of the western hemisphere. The international audience will also find the coverage accessible because, although species and regulations may differ, the techniques described are similar worldwide. The second edition contains a significant expansion of the material included in the first edition. Examples include high pressure processing, inclusion of additional major crustacean species, commerce, fishery centers, and development programs, handling methods on fishing vessels, and new chapters on Toxins, Allergies, and Sensitivities, Composition and Quality, and Risk Management and HACCP and Processing. Fin Fish The Seafood Industry Species Products Processing and Safety, comprehensive in scope and current with today's issues, will prove to be a great asset to any industry professional or seafood technologist working in the field.

More Efficient Utilization of Fish and Fisheries Products M. Sakaguchi, 2004-05-18. This international symposium allowed many researchers and industrial representatives to meet and discuss a broad spectrum of information such as zero emission, resources availability, sustainable utilization of resources, bioactive and functional components in aquatic organisms, utilization of wastes, seafood quality, surimi technologies, and processing and safety. The book aims to provide a current record presented in the international symposium, More Efficient Utilization of Fish and Fisheries Products, 7-10 October 2001, Kyoto, Japan. To provide a stimulus to researchers in this area to cross-fertilize ideas and demonstrate examples of success to enhance values and returns to fisheries fields in national and international terms by providing descriptions of better techniques and methods for utilizing the catch, reducing waste, and providing value by products. Fish Processing Technology George M. Hall, 1997-07-31. The first edition of this unique book combined an outlining and updating of the traditional areas of fish processing technology with detailed descriptions of important new areas of work. This fully revised and updated edition continues to provide coverage of modern aspects of traditional processes and highly practical descriptions of important new areas. All the chapters which have been kept from the first edition have been brought up to date, and there are four new chapters on methods of identifying fish species, modified atmosphere packaging of fish, aspects of quality, and HACCP in fish processing and temperature modeling in fish transportation. Written as an overview of the field for industrialists in developed countries wishing to improve or diversify their operation and for those teaching this aspect of food science and technology the book is also of proven value to workers in developing countries which are expanding their fish processing industries to earn important foreign currency Applied Food Protein Chemistry Zeynep Ustunol, 2014-12-31 Food proteins are of great interest not only because of their nutritional importance and their functionality in foods but also for their detrimental effects Although proteins from milk meats including fish and poultry eggs cereals legumes and oilseeds have been the traditional sources of protein in the human diet potentially any proteins from a biological source could serve as a food protein The primary role of protein in the diet is to provide the building materials for the synthesis of muscle and other tissues and they play a critical role in many biological processes They are also responsible for food texture color and flavor Today food proteins are extracted modified and incorporated into processed foods to impart specific functional properties They can also have adverse effects in the diet proteins such as walnuts pecans almonds and cashews soybean wheat milk egg crustacean and fish proteins can be powerful allergens for some people Applied Food Protein Chemistry is an applied reference which reviews the properties of food proteins and provides in depth information on important plant and animal proteins consumed around the world The book is grouped into three sections 1 overview of food proteins 2 plant proteins and 3 animal proteins Each chapter discusses world production distribution utilization physicochemical properties and the functional properties of each protein as well as its food applications The authors for each of the chapters are carefully selected experts in the field This book will be a valuable reference tool for those who work on food proteins It will also be an important text on applied food protein chemistry for upper level students and graduate students of food science programs

Quality of Fresh and Processed Foods Fereidoon Shahidi, Arthur M. Spanier, Chi-Tang Ho, Terry Braggins, 2012-12-06

Quality is a composite term encompassing many characteristics of foods These include color aroma texture general nutrition shelf life stability and possible presence of undesirable constituents Obviously deterioration of quality may lead to changes in the attributes that characterize the food in its fresh or freshly processed state In addition quality enhancement of products may be carried out using appropriate processing techniques Interaction of different components present with one another could have a profound effect on sensory quality of products Meanwhile presence of extraneous matter such as pesticides and debris may also contribute to a compromise in the quality of foods In addition processing often brings about changes in many attributes of food including its nutritional value Thus examination of process induced changes in food products is important In this book a cursory account of quality attributes of fresh and processed foods is provided The book is of interest to food scientists nutritionists and biochemists in academia government and industry Physicochemical and Microbiological Characteristics of Surimi Seafood Under Thermal and E-beam Processing Jacek Jaczynski, 2002 Effects of thermal and electron beam e beam processing on microbial inactivation and physicochemical properties of surimi and surimi seafood were investigated Thermal death time TDT concept was used to model Staphylococcus aureus inactivation by heat and e

beam Gurney Lurie charts were used to estimate temperature during thermal processing of surimi seafood Dose mapping technique was used to estimate dose absorbed by surimi seafood during e beam processing The dose absorbed increased up to 2 cm and then it gradually decreased reaching a minimum at 5 cm depth of surimi seafood It was determined that one and two sided e beam can efficiently penetrate 3.3 and 8.2 cm of surimi seafood respectively The D value for thermally inactivated S aureus was 0.65, 1.53, 6.52, 49.83 and 971.54 s at 95, 85, 75, 65 and 55 C respectively The D value for S aureus inactivated with e beam was 0.34 kGy The z value for thermally inactivated S aureus between 55-95 C was not linear Thermal processing degraded texture and color of surimi seafood E beam enhanced firmness and decreased the b value of surimi seafood Myosin heavy chain MHC degraded proportionally to the e beam dose Actin was not affected by e beam except treatment at 25 kGy Hydrophobic interactions and disulfide bonds were formed in raw Alaska pollock surimi when treated with e beam

Fish Processing George M. Hall, 2011-06-13 This book seeks to address the challenges facing the international seafood industry via a two pronged approach by offering the latest information on established technologies and introducing new ideas and technologies An introductory chapter sets the tone for the book by presenting the background against which fish processing will exist in the near future Chapter two looks at the environmental and sustainability issues relating to conventional fish processing including processing efficiency and better use of the outputs currently considered wastes The impact of mechanisation and computerisation on environmental sustainability is also addressed Subsequent chapters examine the latest developments in established fish processing technologies such as canning curing freezing and chilling with an emphasis on the environmental aspects of packaging and the process itself In addition quality and processing parameters for specific species including new species are described The second part of the book gives authors the opportunity to introduce the potential technologies and applications of the future to a wider audience These include fermented products and their acceptance by a wider audience the utilisation of fish processing by products as aquaculture feeds and the use of by products for bioactive compounds in biomedical nutraceutical cosmetic and other applications
