The Girl From Uganda Isas Working Paper Series 14:

Regional Developmentalism through Law Jonathan Bashi Rudahindwa, 2018-05-20 Offering a study of regionalism in Africa and investigating the ways in which law can be used to address the issues raised by regional processes on the continent this book examines the African Economic Community considering that it has been entrusted to coordinate and to harmonize policies between various Regional Economic Communities RECs across the continent thereby influencing the continent's approach towards regional integration It seeks to identify how law can be used to strengthen the African RECs while ensuring that they achieve their goal of promoting regional development across the continent Drawing upon economic and political theories and using a critical doctrinal analysis of legal texts and norms the book uncovers the legal and economic underpinnings of the model of regional integration followed by the regional schemes operating under the banner of the AEC aiming to contribute to the search for effective methods to ensure the success of these various initiatives Proposing the concept of Regional Developmentalism Through Law as the most suitable conceptual framework to support the effective establishment of an African Economic Community this book will be of interest to researchers academics and policy makers interested in the correlation between law regional integration and development in Africa

Transitional Justice and the Arab Spring Kirsten Fisher, Robert Stewart, 2015-03-24 This book presents a varied and critical picture of how the Arab Spring demands a re examination and re conceptualization of issues of transitional justice It demonstrates how unique features of this wave of revolutions and popular protests that have swept the Arab world since December 2010 give rise to distinctive concerns and problems relative to transitional justice The contributors explore how these issues in turn add fresh perspective and nuance to the field more generally In so doing it explores fundamental questions of social justice reconstruction and healing in the context of the Arab Spring Including the perspectives of academics and practitioners Transitional Justice and the Arab Spring will be of considerable interest to those working on the politics of the Middle East normative political theory transitional justice international law international relations and human rights

Adapting to high temperatures: evidence on the impacts of sustainable agricultural practices in Uganda Ignaciuk, A., Maggio, G., Mastrorillo, M., Sitko, N., Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2021-02-17 Rising temperatures due to climate change pose a significant threat to agricultural systems and the livelihoods of farmers across the globe Identifying farm management strategies that reduce sensitivity to high temperatures is therefore critical for moderating the adverse effects of climate change In this paper we use spatially granular climate data merged with four waves of household survey data in Uganda to examine empirically the relationships between high temperatures agricultural production outcomes and the adoption including its duration of three sustainable agricultural practices organic fertilizer adoption banana coffee intercropping and cereal legume intercropping We do this using a fixed effect model with instrumental variables to address potential endogeneity issues Our findings indicate that while exposure to high temperature does reduce farmers crop income

the adoption of these practices can offset the negative impact of high temperatures on such income. Indeed we show that the benefits of adopting these practices on the total value of crop production increases monotonically as temperatures increase from their long term averages. Moreover the number of years a farmer adopts a practice is associated with higher total value of crop production and this relationship holds across the full distribution of observed high temperature deviations. Taken together the results suggest that organic fertilizer adoption, banana coffee intercropping and cereal legume intercropping are effective options to adapt to rising temperatures in Uganda and these benefits increase with the duration of adoption. Adaptation policies and programmes must therefore be designed in ways that help farmers overcome initial barriers to adoption of these practices as well as to support farmers to sustain adoption over time. This may require longer term funding horizons for adaptation programmes and innovative support mechanisms to incentivize sustained adoption.

Statistical Tragedy in Africa? Morten Jerven, Deborah Johnston, 2017-10-02. What do we know about economic development in Africa? The answer is that we know much less than we would like to think. This collection assesses the knowledge problem present in statistics on poverty, agriculture, labour, education, health and economic growth. While diverse in origin, the contributors to this book are unified in two conclusions: the quality and quantity of data needs to be improved and this is a concern not just for statisticians. Weaknesses in statistical methodology and practice can misinform policy makers, international agencies, donors, the private sector and the citizens of African countries themselves. This is also a problem for academics from various disciplines from history and economics to social epidemiology and education policy. Not only does academic work on Africa regularly use flawed data but many problems encountered in surveys challenge common academic abstractions. By exploring these flaws, this book will provide a guide for scholars, policy makers and all those using and commissioning surveys in Africa. This book was originally published as a special issue of The Journal of Development Studies.

Refugee Protection and the Role of Law Susan Kneebone, Dallah Stevens, Loretta Baldassar, 2014-06-27. Sixty years on from the signing of the Refugee Convention, forced migration and refugee movements continue to raise global concerns for hosting states and regions, for countries of origin, for humanitarian organisations on the ground and of course for the refugee. This edited volume is framed around two themes which go to the core of contemporary refugeehood: protection and identity. It analyses how the issue of refugee identity is shaped by and responds to the legal regime of refugee protection in contemporary times. The book investigates the premise that there is a narrowing of protection space in many countries and many highly visible incidents of refoulement. It argues that protection, which is a core focus of the Refugee Convention, appears to be under threat as there are many gaps and inconsistencies in practice. Contributors to the volume, who include Erika Feller, Elspeth Guild, Håkan Lambert and Roger Zetter, look at the relevant issues from the perspective of a number of different disciplines including law, politics, sociology and anthropology. The chapters examine the link between identity and protection as a basis for understanding how the Refugee Convention has been and is being applied in policy and practice The situation in a number of jurisdictions and regions in Europe North America South East Asia Africa and the Middle East is explored in order to ask the question does jurisprudence under the Refugee Convention need better coordination and how successful is oversight of the Convention Christian Budget and News of the Day ,1895 The Church Missionary Gleaner ,1902 The Morning Star and Free Baptist ,1909 The Epworth Herald ,1904
