WHEN I BEGAN WITH MY RESEARCH for this book, I had done some investigations on four of the Vollsbücher which I will discuss specifically in this monograph, but I was not aware of the breadth of the genre. While I continued reading representatives of this genre, and studied their interpretations written during the last two hundred years, my own horizon widened considerably. It was a wonderful opportunity to explore new perspectives on late medieval German literature and to grasp some of the links which connect the modern world with the Middle Ages. Part of my research was funded by a Faculty of Humanities Research Mini-Grant, University of Arizona, for which I am very grateful. I also received a generous grant from the American Philosophical Society that allowed me to carry out archival research in Germany, for which I also feel deep gratitude. My thanks go to Dennis Selzer who helped me to correct the English in the manuscript and offered some insightful criticism. I would like to express my gratitude to the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek München for providing me with a photograph of a Fortunatus-woodcut and allowing me to use it for this book. I am also indebted to P. Stabel, principal of the Friedrich-Magnus-Schwend-Gymnasium, Speyer, Germany, for providing me with an article practically impossible to find through traditional research channels. I received invaluable help in the last stages of preparing the manuscript for publication from my friends Professors William C. McDonald and Windsor McConnell. The credit for the manuscript's smoothness in grammar and style goes largely to them. All remaining mistakes are, of course, mine. Last but not least, I want to thank the Edwin Mellen Press for accepting this volume for publication.

I dedicate this book to my dear wife Carolyn and my cheerful son Stephan.
