THE JUSTIFICATION OF RELIGIOUS BELIEF

This is a very serious and thoroughly honest book,¹ and, as one would expect, written in a style which is highly polished. It is a change to have a book in the field of the Philosophy of Religion which is distinctly positive and constructive whilst not at the same time being dogmatic.

The book falls into three parts. The first part attempts to justify in an admittedly summary fashion two assumptions that are made in the rest of the book—

- (1) that traditional theism cannot be shown to be necessarily false or logically incoherent;
- (2) it cannot be proved or rendered probable in any strict sense.

The second part is the all crucial part; in it Professor Mitchell attempts to indicate the way in which Christian belief may be rationally defended and 'in so doing to give an account of the nature of the disagreement between theists and atheists that might commend itself to both parties' (p. 39). In the third part the author examines the implications of Part II for the problem of the nature of faith and the relation between faith and reason; he suggests that there are important resemblances between religious and non-religious cases.

Apart from two brief comments on Part I, I shall, for reasons of relative importance and space, limit my discussion to Part II. First, then, my two brief comments on Part I.

Professor Mitchell admits that his justifications are summary; I fear the reader will regard his treatment of the problem of Evil (p. 10) too summary—he will raise the questions, 'Why so much suffering?' and 'Why isn't it equally distributed if it is a necessary condition for the development of virtues which will fit us for the Heavenly Kingdom?' Likewise the treatment of the problem of making identifying reference to God is just too summary (pp. 17-18).

To turn to Part II. Mitchell rejects the view that there can be no rational case for or against Christianity on the grounds that those who subscribe to this view assume that for any argument to be rational it must conform to the requirements of strict proof or probability and this he claims is false. There can be arguments correctly judged as rational which do not conform to such

The Justification Of Religious Belief:

The Justification of Religious Belief Basil Mitchell, 1973-06-18 Faith and Reason, 2010 The Justification of Science and the Rationality of Religious Belief Michael C. Banner, 1990 In this critical examination of recent accounts of the nature of science and of its justification given by Kuhn Popper Lakatos Laudan and Newton Smith Banner contends that models of scientific rationality which are used in criticism of religious beliefs are in fact often inadequate as accounts of the nature of science He argues that a realist philosophy of science both reflects the character of science and scientific justifications and suggests that religious belief could be given a justification of the same sort Religious Experience, Justification, and History Matthew C. Bagger, 1999-11-13 Many philosophers of religion have sought to defend the rationality of religious belief by shifting the burden of proof onto the critic of religious belief Some have appealed to extraordinary religious experience in making their case Religious Experience Justification and History restores neglected explanatory and historical considerations to the debate Through a study of William James it contests the accounts of religious experience offered in recent works Through reflection on the history of philosophy it also unravels the philosophical use of the term justification Matthew Bagger argues that the commitment to supernatural explanations implicit in the religious experiences employed to justify religious belief contradicts the modern ideal of human flourishing For contrast and to demonstrated the indispensability of history he includes a study of Teresa of Avila s mystical theology The controversial supernatural explanations implicit in extraordinary religious experience places the burden of proof on the believer The Justification of Science and the Rationality of Religious Belief Michael C. Banner, 1990 The author examines the nature of scientific theories and of religious belief and argues that religious belief can receive a defence as compelling as that given to the best scientific theories The Justification of Religious Belief David Barber, 1998 Faith in Theory and Practice Elizabeth S. Radcliffe, Elizabeth Schmidt Radcliffe, Carol J. White, 1993 Two views of theistic faith are presented in this book Some contributors see faith as a set of beliefs about God and seek substantiation for those beliefs Others perceive faith less as a set of beliefs than as a special way of living in relationship to God The connection between these two views is an intriguing theme winding through the collection and explicitly addressed by Michael A Brown in the closing essay The Justification of Religious Beliefs Basil Mitchell, 1978 Human Needs and the Justification of Religious Belief A. G. Widgery, 1909 Evidence and Religious Belief Kelly James Clark, Raymond J. VanArragon, 2011-07-28 A fundamental question in philosophy of religion is whether religious belief must be based on evidence in order to be properly held In recent years two prominent positions on this issue have been staked out evidentialism which claims that proper religious belief requires evidence and Reformed epistemology which claims that it does not Evidence and Religious Belief contains eleven chapters by prominent philosophers which push the discussion in new directions The volume has three parts The first part explores the demand for evidence some chapters object to it while others seek to restate it or find space for compromise between Reformed epistemology and evidentialism The second part explores ways in which beliefs are related to evidence that is ways in which the evidence for or against religious belief that is available to a person can depend on that person's background beliefs and other circumstances The third part contains chapters that discuss actual evidence for and against religious belief Evidence for belief in God includes the so called common consent of the human race and the way that such belief makes sense of the moral life evidence against it includes profound puzzles about divine freedom which suggest that it is impossible for a being to be morally perfect
