

PHASES OF BURN MANAGEMENT

Med - Surg

1. EMERGENT PHASE

Time required to address immediate, life-threatening issues

- Primary concerns: the start of hypovolemic shock and the production of edema
- Hypovolemic shock is the most serious initial hazard to a large burn patient.
- The phase comes to a conclusion when fluid mobilization and diuresis commence.

2. ACUTE PHASE

The fluid has been mobilized, and diuresis has begun (urine production)

- It could linger for several weeks or months.
- Infection prevention, pain management, nutrition, and wound care are among the top priorities.

3. REHABILITATIVE PHASE

- The burn has healed, and the patient is back to work (physically and mentally)
- It can happen as soon as two weeks after the burn to 7-8 months afterwards.
- Primary areas of focus: psychosocial, ADLs, PT, OT, and cosmetic correction.
