STEM Models of Success J. Luke Wood,Robert T. Palmer,2014-03-01 As the U S focuses on positioning itself to retain and advance its status as a world leader in technology and scientific innovation a recognition that community colleges are a critical site for intervention has become apparent Community colleges serve the lion s share of the nation s postsecondary students In fact 40% of all undergraduate students are enrolled in community colleges these students account for nearly 30% of all STEM undergraduate majors in postsecondary institutions These students serve as a core element of the STEM pipeline into four year colleges and universities via the community college transfer function Moreover community colleges are the primary postsecondary access point for non traditional students including students of color first generation low income and adult students This is a particularly salient point given that these populations are sordidly underrepresented among STEM graduates and in the STEM workforce Increasing success among these populations can contribute significantly to advancing the nation's interests in STEM. As such, the community college is situated as an important site for innovative practices that have strong implications for bolstering the nation's production and sustenance of a STEM labor force. In recognition of this role, the National Science Foundation and private funding agencies have invested millions of dollars into research and programs designed to bolster the STEM pipeline. From this funding and other independently sponsored inquiry, promising programs, initiatives, and research recommendations have been identified. These efforts hold great promise for change with the potential to transform the education and outcome of STEM students at all levels. This important book discusses many of these promising programs, initiatives, and research-based recommendations that can impact the success of STEM students in the community college. This compilation is timely on the national landscape as the federal government has placed increasing importance on improving STEM degree production as a strategy for America's future stability in an increasingly competitive global marketplace. Informed by research and theory, each chapter in this volume blazes new territory in articulating how community colleges can advance outcomes for students in STEM, particularly those from historically underrepresented and underserved communities.

Encyclopedia of Human Services and Diversity Linwood H. Cousins, 2014-09-05. The Encyclopedia of Human Services and Diversity is the first encyclopedia to reflect the changes in the mission of human services professionals as they face today's increasingly diverse service population. Diversity encompasses a broad range of human differences, including differences in ability and disability, age, education level, ethnicity, gender, geographic origin, religion, sexual orientation, socioeconomic class, and values. Understanding the needs and problems of Asian Americans, Hispanic Americans, the deaf, the blind, the LGBT community, and many other groups demands an up-to-date and cutting-edge reference. This three-volume encyclopedia provides human services students, professors, librarians, and practitioners the reference information they need to meet the needs of an increasingly diverse population. Features 600 signed entries organized A to Z across three volumes. Entries authored by key figures in the field conclude with cross-references and further readings. A Reader's Guide groups related articles within broad thematic areas such as aging, community, mental health, family, and child services, substance abuse, etc. A detailed index, the Reader's Guide, and cross-references combine for search and browse in the electronic version. A helpful Resource Guide guides students to classic books, journals, and web sites, and a glossary assists them with the terminology of the field. Available in both print and electronic formats. The Encyclopedia of Human Services and Diversity is an ideal reference for students, practitioners, faculty, and librarians.
