comprehensible which helps grow your vocabulary grammar and other subtle aspects of the language In the end the goal of the parallel text books is to help you understand and learn at the same time by helping you when you need it and not helping you when you don't need it If you can learn to use parallel text books correctly they're incredibly powerful tools that can teach you a very nuanced version of the language you're trying to learn

How to Use Parallel Text Books To make the most of using parallel text books follow these steps

- 1 Don't read both languages all the time This is the most important step on this list Don't read both languages every time you read your native language is just an aid for understanding the target language and should be treated as such If you start reading both languages all the time you're basically giving your brain the green light to always translate in your head This is very important not to do because translating in your head is tiresome and only slows you down and keeps you from sounding natural when you speak
- 2 Read often Reading in a new language is just like learning to read again You need to be reading as much as possible so you can grow as much as possible Take in as many different types of books as you can and read them until you can digest and retain the information in them Not only is reading often important to get used to the method of reading parallel texts but it also just gets you comfortable around your new language and helps you begin to think in that language when you're using it Essentially the more you read the better you'll speak read and write in the language that you're studying
- 3 Read out loud whenever possible This will probably make you uncomfortable at first because most of us don't regularly read out loud However it's very important to read books out loud when you're reading in a foreign language because it helps you with things like pronunciation rhythm etc
