New Families, No Families? Frances K. Goldscheider, Linda J. Waite, 1991 Is the American family a thing of the past Almost anyone can tell a story that illustrates how dramatically things have changed in the past decades Nonmarriage childlessness and divorce are commonplace Most children leave their parents home and live for increasing periods before marriage as independent adults But there are also signs of strengths Some parents play more equal roles both financially and in coping with household tasks In this revealing new study Frances Goldscheider and Linda Waite discuss cogently the question of whether we are headed for no families or new families Adults across the nation who reached thirtysomething in the early 1980s are the primary focus of the book although broader patterns of social change are seen in the influence of their parents experiences on them and in their own children s experiences of family life The authors begin with their subjects as very young adults examining their plans for work and family and their attitudes toward women's work and family roles. As these young men and women move farther into adulthood, we learn what influences their chances of marriage, their patterns of family building and dissolving, and the division of labor in the families they form. In each case, the authors focus on the effects of exposure to different family structures in childhood and young adulthood. The authors find surprisingly that the real threats to the family are in the home itself: the new option of a home of one's own in a variety of circumstances outside of marriage; most men's noninvolvement in the home and its tasks; and the fact that knowledge of and respect for basic skills involved in making a home are not being taught to today's sons and daughters.

The Ashgate Research Companion to Islamic Law Peri Bearman, 2016-03-16 This unparalleled Companion provides a comprehensive and authoritative guide to Islamic law to all with an interest in this increasingly relevant and developing field. The volume presents classical Islamic law through a historiographical introduction to and analysis of Western scholarship, while key debates about hot button issues in modern day circumstances are also addressed. In twenty-one chapters, distinguished authors offer an overview of their particular specialty, reflect on past and current thinking, and point to directions for future research. The Companion is divided into four parts. The first offers an introduction to the history of Islamic law as well as a discussion of how Western scholarship and historiography have evolved over time. The second part delves into the substance of Islamic law. Legal rules for the areas of legal status, family law, socio-economic justice, penal law, constitutional authority, and the law of war are all discussed in this section. Part three examines the adaptation of Islamic law in light of colonialism and the modern nation state, as well as the subsequent re-Islamization of national legal systems. The final section presents contemporary debates on the role of Islamic law in areas such as finance, the diaspora, modern governance, and medical ethics, and the volume concludes by questioning the role of Sharia law as a legal authority in the modern context. By outlining the history of Islamic law through a linear study of research, this collection is unique in its examination of past and present scholarship and the lessons we can draw from this for the future. It introduces scholars and students to the challenges posed in the past to the magnitude of milestones that were achieved in the reinterpretation and revision of established ideas and ultimately to a thorough conceptual understanding of Islamic law.

Women, the Family, and Peasant Revolution in China Kay Ann Johnson, 2009-02-15 Kay Ann Johnson provides much needed information about women and gender equality under Communist leadership. She contends that although the Chinese Communist Party has always ostensibly favored women's rights and family reform, it has rarely pushed for such reforms. In reality, its policies often have reinforced the traditional role of women to further the Party's predominant economic and military aims. Johnson's primary focus is on reforms of marriage and family, because traditional marriage, family, and kinship practices have had the greatest influence in defining and shaping women's place in Chinese society. Conversant with current theory in political science, anthropology, and Marxist and feminist analysis, Johnson writes with clarity and discernment, free of dogma. Her discussions of family reform ultimately provide insights into the Chinese government's concern with decreasing the national birth rate which has become a top priority Johnson's predictions of a coming crisis in population control are borne out by the recent increase in female infanticide and the government abortion campaign      Chaste Wives and Prostitute Sisters Anuja Agrawal, 2020-11-29 This book is an anthropological study of the unusual coincidence of prostitution and patriarchy among an extremely marginalized group in north India the Bedias who are also a de-notified community It is the first detailed account of the implications of a systematic practice of familial prostitution on the kinship structures and marriage practices of a community This starkly manifests among the Bedias in the clear separation between sisters and daughters who engage in prostitution and wives and daughters in law who do not The Bedias exemplify a situation in which prostitution of young unmarried women is the mainstay of the familial economy of an entire social group Tracing the recent origins of the practice in the community the author goes on to explore the manner in which this familial economy manifests itself in the lives of individual women and the kind of family groupings it produces She then examines the repercussion this economy has on the lives of Bedia men how the problem of their marriage is resolved and how the Bedia wives become repositories of female purity which otherwise stands jeopardized by Bedia sisters engaged in prostitution

The Woman Citizen, 1925      Women and Rights Caroline Sweetman, 1995 The UN Human Rights Conference in 1993 proclaimed that Women's rights are human rights This book in the Focus on Gender series explores issues of women's rights including the legal background and history of human rights legislation the special human rights problems of women in situations of conflict or as refugees violence against women as a human rights violation women's rights as workers the rights of disabled women and the importance of providing information and training to enable women to claim their rights Focusing on women's rights involves the recognition that throughout the world legal systems to guarantee rights have their roots in cultures which discriminate against women Development and human rights are closely linked and the empowerment of women to claim the human rights to which they are entitled will enable them to take full advantage of development processes
