Frederick Boyle, 1884 The Old Helmet (Complete) Susan Warner, The first thing noticeable is a gleam of white teeth Now that is a pleasant thing generally yet its pleasantness depends after all upon the way the lips part over the ivory There is a world of character discoverable in the curve of those soft lines In the present case that of a lady as it is undoubtedly the very first thing you notice the matter must be investigated The mouth is rather large with well cut lips however and in the smile which comes not infrequently the lips part freely and frankly though not too far over a wealth of white beautiful teeth So free is the curve of the upper lip and so ready its revelation of the treasures beneath that there is an instant suspicion of a certain frankness and daring and perhaps of a little mischief on the part of their possessor so free at the same time as to forbid the least notion of consciousness or design in that beautiful revelation But how fine and full and regular are those white treasures of hers seeming to speak for a strong and perfect physical organisation and if your eye goes further for her flat hat is on the ground you will see in the bountiful rich head of hair another token of the same thing Her figure is finely developed her colour clear and healthy not blonde the full brown hair and eyes agree with the notion of a nature more lively than we assign to the other extreme of complexion The features are not those of a beauty though better than that perhaps there is a world of life and sense and spirit in them It speaks for her good nature and feeling that her smile is as frank as ever just now and as pleasant as ever for she is with about the last one of her party on whom she would have chosen to bestow herself The occasion is a visit to some celebrated ruins a day of pleasure and Eleanor would a good deal rather be walking and talking with another much more interesting member of the company in whose society indeed her day had begun but Mr Carlisle had been obliged suddenly to return home for an hour or two and Eleanor is sitting on a grassy bank with a gentleman beside her whom she knows very little and does not care about at all That is she has no idea he can be very interesting and he is a grave looking personage but we are not going to describe him at present A word must be given to the place where they are It is a little paradise If the view is not very extended it is rich in its parts and the eye and the mind are filled The grass is shaven smooth on the bank where the two are sitting so it is all around under trees which stand with wilful wildness of luxuriance grouped and scattered apparently as they would They are very old in several varieties of kind and in the perfect development and thrift of each kind Among them are the ruins of an old priory They peep forth here and there from the trees One broken tower stands free with ivy masking its sides and crumbling top and stains of weather and the hues of lichen and moss enriching what was once its plain grey colour Other portions of the ruins are seen by glimpses further on among the trees Standing somewhat off by itself yet encompassed by the congeners of those same trees almost swallowed up among them is a comfortable picturesque little building not in ruins though it has been built up from the ruins It is the parsonage where the rector of the parish lives Beyond this wood and these buildings old and new the eye can catch only bits of hills and woods that promise beauty further on but nearer than they and making a boundary line between the present and the distant the flash of a little river is seen which curves about the old priory lands A somewhat doubtful sunlight is struggling over it all
