The Wanderings of a Spiritualist Arthur Conan Doyle, 1921. This is an account of the wanderings of a spiritualist, geographical and speculative. Should the reader have no interest in psychic things, if indeed any human being can be so foolish as not to be interested in his own nature and fate, then this is the place to put the book down. It were better also to end the matter now, if you have no patience with a go-as-you-please style of narrative which founds itself upon the conviction that thought may be as interesting as action, and which is bound by its very nature to be intensely personal. I write a record of what absorbs my mind, which may be very different from that which appeals to yours. But if you are content to come with me upon these terms, then let us start with my apologies in advance for the pages which may bore you, and with my hopes that some may compensate you by pleasure or by profit. I write these lines with a pad upon my knee, heaving upon the long roll of the Indian Ocean, running large and grey under a grey-streaked sky, with the rain-swept hills of Ceylon just one shade greyer lining the Eastern skyline. So, under many difficulties, it will be carried on, which may explain, if it does not excuse, any slurring of a style which is at its best but plain English. There was one memorable night when I walked forth with my head throbbing and my whole frame quivering from the villa of Mr Southey at Merthyr. Behind me, the brazen glare of Dowlais iron works lit up the sky, and in front twinkled the many lights of the Welsh town. For two hours my wife and I had sat within, listening to the whispering voices of the dead, voices which are so full of earnest life and of desperate endeavours to pierce the barrier of our dull senses. They had quivered and wavered around us, giving us pet names, sweet, sacred things, the intimate talk of the olden time. Graceful lights, signs of spirit power, had hovered over us in the darkness. It was a different and a wonderful world.
