

What was this area like before Stonehenge?

Long before the first people built Stonehenge, this area was a busy place. It was a hub of activity, with people coming and going. The area was a meeting place for people from all over the region. It was a place where people came to trade goods and services. It was a place where people came to share ideas and knowledge. It was a place where people came to live.

Over 20,000 years old, the skeleton is the oldest human remains found in the area. It was found in a small, simple grave. The skeleton was well-preserved, with most of the bones still in place. It was a remarkable find, as it provided a glimpse into the lives of people who lived in the area long before the first people built Stonehenge.
