William John Courthope, 1926 Il Marmo spirante Joris van Gastel, 2013-06-28 The sculptors of the Roman Baroque including masters such as Gian Lorenzo Bernini Alessandro Algardi and Giuliano Finelli managed to achieve an unprecedented vivaciousness in their works And yet the apparent life of these sculptures is persistently obscured by their materiality Soft undulating flesh dramatic movements and fluttering draperies are captured in hard and lifeless marble Thus sculpture challenges the beholder is cause for confusion or frustration Taking the manner in which the beholder's engagement with sculpture is played out in contemporary poetry and other sources as a point of departure and also introducing ideas from modern day psychology this study explores the various ways contemporary viewers dealt with sculpture's double character. As a result, a new light is shed on some of the unquestionable masterpieces of European art. The sculptors of the 17th-century Baroque, among them masters like Gian Lorenzo Bernini, Alessandro Algardi, and Giuliano Finelli, achieved an unparalleled vitality in their works. Contrary to the apparent life, however, the hard materiality of these sculptures – soft, moving flesh, dramatic movements, and fluttering fabrics – is captured in hard, lifeless marble. So, the sculpture challenges the viewer and causes confusion or even disorientation. Using contemporary poetry and other sources, which reflect the interaction between viewer and sculpture, this study examines how contemporaries dealt with this double character of sculpture. It also takes into account the insights of modern psychology. The result is a new approach to some of the most important masterpieces of European art.
