participants provide individual and collective narrative lenses to answer this study's research questions through surveys and face to face semi structured interviews Information pertaining to unit policy procedures and communication resources was also collected A number of issues emerged through the data analysis clearly reflecting the experiences and perceptions of this case study's advising professionals 1 the advising professionals generally found parental involvement to be helpful 2 that most parental involvement revolved around legitimate issues improving the advisors' knowledge of specific student problems capital 3 there appears to be some generational differences in how advisors approach interaction with parents based on their own age and life experiences 4 that the negative narratives perpetuated by the media aspects of the literature and shared conversations amongst advisors continue to dominate advisors' responses to parental engagement 5 there is an emotional aspect to parental engagement 6 that there is a need for specific training for advisors to engage parents and 7 that good practices are emerging regarding how advisors can effectively work with parents to assist students and parents through the transition stage from home and high school to the college environment The case study's results and analysis offer a series of conclusions and recommendation both for practice and for research The study makes a contribution to a field where there is a presently a dearth of research based studies

O'Banion,2019-12-10 Academic advising is the second most important function in the community college If it is not conducted with the utmost efficiency and effectiveness the most important function in the college instruction will fail to achieve its purpose of ensuring that students succeed in navigating the curriculum to completion The purpose of academic advising is to help students select a program of study to meet their life and vocational goals As such academic advising is a central and important activity in the process of education

Academic advising occurs at least once each term for every student in the college few student support functions occur as often or affect so many students But while there is general agreement concerning the importance of academic advising for the efficient functioning of the institution and the effective functioning of the student there is little agreement regarding the nature of academic advising and who should perform the function In this seminal work on academic advising the authors of three overarching chapters address the key issues and challenges of academic advising followed by the authors of four of the most innovative and successful programs of academic advising in the nation How about College? American School Counselor Association, 1962 The College Guide for Parents Charles J.
