Robillard, 2020-02-21 First published in 1992 The Pacific Ocean is the largest geographical feature on the face of the earth covering about one third of its entire surface Occupying part of that large expanse are the far flung islands of the Pacific As the papers of this volume clearly indicate the post world war II era and decolonization have brought unprecedented change and the Pacific is now experiencing problems that were formerly associated with other Third World nations Most Pacific countries have rapidly expanding populations and over half of all Pacific Islanders are now in their teenage years or younger Education and modern communications have served to increase aspirations and attracted by hopes of employment and the distractions of urban life islanders are gravitating to urban centers The Experimental Self Jan Golinski, 2016-05-11

What did it mean to be a scientist before the profession itself existed Jan Golinski finds an answer in the remarkable career of Humphry Davy the foremost chemist of his day and one of the most distinguished British men of science of the nineteenth century Originally a country boy from a modest background Davy was propelled by his scientific accomplishments to a knighthood and the presidency of the Royal Society An enigmatic figure to his contemporaries Davy has continued to elude the efforts of biographers to classify him poet friend to Coleridge and Wordsworth author of travel narratives and a book on fishing chemist and inventor of the miners safety lamp What are we to make of such a man In The Experimental Self Golinski argues that Davy s life is best understood as a prolonged process of self experimentation He follows Davy from his youthful enthusiasm for physiological experiment through his self fashioning as a man of science in a period when the path to a scientific career was not as well trodden as it is today What emerges is a portrait of Davy as a creative fashioner of his own identity through a lifelong series of experiments in selfhood

Alternative Pathways in Science and Industry David J. Hess,2007-03-16 In Alternative Pathways in Science and Industry David Hess examines how social movements and other forms of activism affect innovation in science technology and industry Synthesizing and extending work in social studies of science and technology social movements and globalization Hess explores the interaction of grassroots environmental action and mainstream industry and offers a conceptual framework for understanding it Hess proposes a theory of scientific and technological change that considers the roles that both industry and grassroots consumers play in setting the research agenda in science and technology and he identifies alternative pathways by which social movements can influence scientific and technological innovation He analyzes four of these pathways industrial opposition movements organized against targeted technologies as in the campaign against nuclear energy technology and product oriented movements which press for alternatives as does the organic food movement localism which promotes local ownership as in buy local campaigns and access pathways which support a more equitable distribution of resources Within each pathway Hess examines reforms in five different areas agriculture energy waste and manufacturing infrastructure and finance The book s theoretical argument and empirical evidence demonstrate the complex pattern of incorporation of grassroots innovations and transformation of alternative ownership structures and the alternative products themselves that has characterized the relationship of industry and activism Hess s analysis of alternative pathways to change suggests ways economic organizations could shift to a more just and sustainable course in the twenty first century
