The increasingly globalized economy is driving the need for human resource managers (HRM) to adopt and develop robust strategies to support a multinational and diverse workforce. The posting, hosting, and managing employees to and from other countries pose a major challenge due to the variations and disparities in such areas as national culture, regulatory environment, and economic conditions. In the given scenario, the multinational news agency intends to give Melissa an international expatriate duty in Qatar.

Although there is limited need to learn cultural languages, HRM should strategize on how to manage Melissa's expectations, stimulate a positive attitude, and promote a comprehensive understanding of the business and societal norms in Qatar.
