Martin,Thomas F. Saal,2014-07-15 As soon as there were automobiles there was racing The first recorded race an over road event from Paris to Rouen France was organized by the French newspaper Le Petit Journal in 1894 Seeing an opportunity for a similar event Hermann H Kohlsaat publisher of the Chicago Times Herald sponsored what was hailed as the Race of the Century a 54 mile race from Chicago s Jackson Park to Evanston Illinois and back Frank Duryea won in a time of 10 hours and 23 minutes of which 7 hours and 53 minutes were actually spent on the road Race cars and competition have progressed continuously since that time and today s 200 mph races bear little resemblance to the event Duryea won This work traces American auto racing through the 20th century covering its significant milestones developments and personalities Subjects included are Bill Elliott dirt track racing board track racing Henry Ford Grand Prix races Dale Earnhardt the Vanderbilt Cup Bill France Gordon Bennett the Indianapolis Motor Speedway the Mercer the Stutz Duesenberg Frank Lockhart drag racing the Trans Am Paul Newman vintage racing land speed records Al Unser Wilbur Shaw the Corvette the Cobra Richard Petty NASCAR Can Am Mickey Thompson Roger Penske Mario Andretti Jeff Gordon and Formula One Through interviews with participants and track records this text shows where when and how racing changed It describes the growth of each different form of auto racing as well as the people and technologies that made it ever faster Concepts, Kinds, and Cognitive Development Frank C. Keil,1992-01-30 In Concepts Kinds and Cognitive Development Frank C Keil provides a coherent account of how concepts and word meanings develop in children adding to our understanding of the representational nature of concepts and word meanings at all ages Keil argues that it is impossible to adequately understand the nature of conceptual representation without also considering the issue of learning Weaving together issues in cognitive development philosophy and cognitive psychology he reconciles numerous theories backed by empirical evidence from nominal kinds studies natural kinds studies and studies of fundamental categorical distinctions He shows that all this evidence when put together leads to a better understanding of semantic and conceptual development The book opens with an analysis of the problems of modeling qualitative changes in conceptual development investigating how concepts of natural kinds nominal kinds and artifacts evolve The studies on nominal kinds document a powerful and unambiguous developmental pattern indicating a shift from a reliance on global tabulations of characteristic features to what appears to be a small set of defining ones The studies on natural kinds document an analogous shift toward a core theory instead of simple definition Both sets of studies are strongly supported by cross cultural data While these patterns seem to suggest that the young child organizes concepts according to characteristic features Keil argues that there is a framework of conceptual categories and causal beliefs that enables even very young children to understand kinds at a deeper theoretically guided level This account suggests a new way of understanding qualitative change and carries strong implications for how concepts are represented at any point in development
