Her father was a millionaire race car driver who became chairman of Bentley Motors and her grandfather cofounded the De Beers mining company. But by the late 1930s, debutante Diana Barnato had enough of her affluent chaperoned existence and sought excitement in flying soloing at Brooklands after only six hours training. Joining the Air Transport Auxiliary in 1941 to help ferry aircraft to squadrons and bases throughout the country, she flew scores of different aircraft: fighters, bombers, and trainers in all kinds of conditions and without a radio. By 1945, Barnato had lost many friends, a fiancé, and a husband, but she continued to fly. In 1962, she was awarded the Jean Lennox Bird Trophy for notable achievement in aviation, but her greatest moment was yet to come when in 1963 she flew a Lightning through the sound barrier, becoming the fastest woman in the world. Spreading My Wings is her remarkable memoir brimming with history and adventure. Flight Research at NASA Langley Research Center Mark A. Chambers, 2007 Following the creation of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics in 1915, a unique flight research operations division was established at the nation's first civilian aeronautics research laboratory, the Langley Memorial Aeronautical Laboratory. Langley flight research personnel helped the nation's aircraft industry bloom during the Golden Era of aviation throughout the 1920s and 1930s. Langley's flight research then helped win World War II with performance-enhancing modifications to new aircraft. During the cold war, Langley helped the country maintain an edge in aeronautics over its Warsaw Pact rivals. When the space race began, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) was created in 1958, and Langley's pilots were instrumental in training astronauts. In addition to advancing rotorcraft during the 1960s and 1970s, Langley research pioneered a multitude of military and civil Vertical Short Takeoff and Landing (V-STOL) concepts. During the 1970s, 1980s, and 1990s, Langley research developed advancements in general and commercial aviation technologies. NASA Reference Publication, 1977

It was the first operational Stirling Squadron, the RAF's first four-engine heavy bomber, and flew the first long-distance raids into the heart of Nazi Germany. This new aircraft was a breakthrough in terms of range and bomb load, but it was also an aircraft that suffered from many teething problems. Long-distance navigation was also a black art before the introduction of radio navigation systems, and the squadron suffered many fatalities in those early wartime years. Having gained expertise in their task, the unit was the first to be equipped with the H2S navigational aid and eventually became one of the original elite.
