The History Of Lloyds And Of Marine Insurance In Great Britain:

The History of Lloyd's and of Marine Insurance in Great Britain Frederick Martin, 2004 Martin 1830 1883 examines the development of marine insurance in what was then the world's leading maritime power. He shows moreover that the system developed under the leadership of Lloyd's helped Great Britain to achieve this position. Martin emphasizes the influence of commercial international and admiralty law in the evolution of marine insurance and argues that they helped the industry to mature into an effective system that is emulated throughout the world. Excerpt: CHAPTER XVIII Lloyd's Registry Of Shipping HE necessity of keeping some record of shipping so as to be able to discover in a reasonable time and without much personal trouble and inconvenience the age condition state of repair and general condition of vessels which their owners wished to have insured must have been felt at a very early period by the underwriters. It appears from various indications that the earliest frequenters of Lloyd's Coffee house in Lombard Street kept for their own guidance tabular accounts of such ships as were likely to be offered them for a line and these lists likely enough passed from hand to hand the mutual interchange of information being obviously to the interest of all. The earliest of these tables were like the newsletters furnishing commercial and shipping intelligence which preceded Lloyd's List not printed. In the numbers of Lloyd's News from September 1696 to February 1697 commented upon already at some length there is frequent mention of Ships Lists and from the notices here and in contemporary pamphlets there is little doubt that they were written documents not very dissimilar to the news letters and differing from the latter only in furnishing not general intelligence but practical information for persons connected with shipping more particularly merchants and underwriters. The first attempt to put these Ships Lists in type was in all probability contemporaneous with the establishment of the organ of Lloyd's still in existence having reached the goodly age of one hundred and fifty years. It was hitherto believed and is usually asserted that the oldest printed register of ships was established in 1760 but careful investigation proves this to be The History of Lloyd's and of Marine Insurance in Great Britain Frederick Martin, 2017-09-17 Excerpt from The History of Lloyd's and of Marine Insurance in Great Britain With an Appendix Containing to Marine Insurance The statistical appendix aims at laying a few foundation stones for a scientific basis of marine insurance. Whether this aim is capable of realization is a question which time only can solve. What is undeniable is that marine insurance though it existed centuries before life insurance was even thought of is still behind the latter in not resting as this does on the firm ground of mathematical calculation.

tions drawing laws of probabilities from the results of experience At this moment the business of marine insurance is subject entirely to the exercise of personal and individual experience fallible in its very nature even when brought to the utmost possible perfection while life insurance on the other hand stands on the solid foundation of mortality tables and of actuarial computations derived from a vast amount of widely gathered statistics To construct mortality tables for ships the same as for human beings is no doubt a matter of greater complication still there appears no absolute impossibility for the accomplishment of the task It will doubtless be a gigantic labour to gather the whole of the materials requisite for the work and there is probably but one body of men capable of undertaking it namely the Corporation of Lloyd s About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Publishing Business in Eighteenth-century England James Raven, 2014 Publishing Business in Eighteenth Century England assesses the contribution of the business press and the publication of print to the economic transformation of England The impact of non book printing has been long neglected A raft of jobbing work serviced commerce and finance while many more practical guides and more ephemeral pamphlets on trade and investment were read than the books that we now associate with the foundations of modern political economy A pivotal change in the book trades apparent from the late seventeenth century was the increased separation of printers from bookseller publishers from the skilled artisan to the bookseller financier who might have no prior training in the printing house but who took up the sale of publications as another commodity This book examines the broader social relationship between publication and the practical conduct of trade the book asks what it meant to be published and how print text and image related to the involvement of script The age of Enlightenment was an age of astonishing commercial and financial transformation offering printers and the business press new market opportunities Print helped to effect a business revolution The reliability reputation regularity authority and familiarity of print increased trust and confidence and changed attitudes and behaviours New modes of publication and the wide ranging products of printing houses had huge implications for the way lives were managed regulated and recorded JAMES RAVEN is Professor of Modern History at the University of Essex and a Fellow of Magdalene College Cambridge
