The Honorable Senator Sage-Brush Francis Lynde, 2020-06-16 Some one was giving a dinner dance at the country club and Blount who was a week endguest of the Beverleys was ill natured enough to be resentful. What right had a gay and frivolous world to come and thrust its light hearted happiness upon him when Patricia had said No. It was like bullying a cripple he told himself morosely and when he had read the single telegram which had come while he was at dinner he begged Mrs Beverley indulgence and went out to find a chair in a corner of the veranda where the frivolities had not as yet intruded. It was a North Shore night like that in which Shakespeare has mingled moon shadows with the gossamer fantasies of the immortal Dream. Though the dance was in doors the trees on the lawn and the road fronting verandas of the club house were hung with festoons of Chinese lanterns. At the carriage entrance smart automobiles were coming and going and one of them with the dust of the Boston parkways on its running gear brought the guests of honor three daughters of a Western senator lately home from their summer abroad. Blount knew neither the honorers nor the honored ones and had resolutely refused the chance offered him by Mrs Beverley to amend his ignorance. For Patricia's No was not yet twenty four hours old and since it had changed the stars in their courses for Patricia's love the cataclysm was much too recent to postulate anything like a return of the heavenly bodies to their normal orbits. Not that Blount put it that way either.

to Mrs Beverley or to himself He was a level eyed square shouldered young man of an up to date world and the stock from which he sprang was prosaic and practical rather than poetic or sentimental But the fact remained and when he sat back in his corner absently folding the lately received telegram into a narrow spill and scowling moodily down upon the coming and going procession of motor cars he was unconsciously giving a very life like imitation of the disappointed lover the world over It was thus and apparently by the merest chance that Gantry found him a chance because the Winnebasset club house is spacious and the dinner dance minimized the hazards of a meeting between two unattached men who were merely transient guests But the railroadman at least was unfeignedly glad

The Railroad in American Fiction Grant Burns, 2015-01-28 Nothing better represented the early spirit of American expansion than the railroad Dominant in daily life as well as in the popular imagination the railroad appealed strongly to creative writers For many years fiction of railroad life and travel was plentiful and varied As the nineteenth century receded the railroad's allure faded as did railroad fiction Today it is hard to sense what the railroad once meant to Americans The fiction of the railroad often by railroaders themselves recaptures that sense and provides valuable insights on American cultural history This extensively annotated bibliography lists and discusses in 956 entries novels and short stories from the 1840s to the present in which the railroad is important Each entry includes plot and character description to help the reader make an informed decision on the source's merit A detailed introduction discusses the history of railroad fiction and highlights common themes such as strikes hoboes and the roles of women and African Americans Such writers of pure railroad fiction as Harry Bedwell Frank Packard and Cy Warman are well represented along with such literary artists as Mark Twain Thomas Wolfe Flannery O'Connor and Ellen Glasgow Work by minority writers including Jean Toomer Richard Wright Frank Chin and Toni Morrison also receives close attention An appendix organizes entries by decade of publication and the work is indexed by subject and title
